

The Daily Examiner

JULY 25, 1885.

Editorial Notes.

Sir Leonard Tilley attributes his recent great success on the money market of England to the fact that: "There is in the Old World a general impression that Canada, with its vast resources and fertile territories, has a great future before it."

Referring to the Franchise Act, the Montreal Herald (Independent) says: "When it is a little while in operation many well-meaning people will, we venture to predict, wonder at all the fuss that was made about it, and be puzzled to see why it was so vehemently opposed. It is to be hoped that the Liberal party will not have cause to repent of having carried to such excessive length the unconstitutional and anti-Liberal policy of obstruction. It was a bad example to act, which may be followed by unscrupulous men to the injury of some good cause."

Sir Leonard reports that the feeling in England regarding our Northwest rising and the manner in which it was put down is one of admiration of the pluck shown by our men and the promptness with which the volunteers answered the call of duty together with the quick time made in despatching the troops. The energy of the Minister of Militia and his department, the good judgment and soldierly bearing of General Middleton, are everywhere. Sir Leonard says, spoken of in terms of highest praise, both in Government and military circles.

The Patriot of last evening has a long article, the main object of which is not to inform the public. It contains no explanation of the interesting episode of the cows, nothing about the amnesty Mr. Mackenzie's Government granted to Riel, nothing about the attempt of the Grits to disfranchise our young men by making the qualification of electors for the House of Commons identical in this Province with those of electors for the Legislative Council, nothing about the absorbing question of the Fisheries and Reciprocity—nothing at all about any of the topics of the day. The leading idea of the Patriot is evidently to do that which is quite impossible, viz., to crush the Hon. Donald Ferguson by heaping upon him a load of obloquy, and to resurrect the dead political body of the Hon. David Laird. Nothing that the Patriot can do can injure the Hon. Donald Ferguson, if he continue in his present manly and straightforward course. Does he wish to address the electors, he asks his ablest opponents to come and hear him and challenges them to prove, in fair and open debate, that the views he advances are wrong. He studies the various questions of the day carefully, and then he gives the result of his enquiries to the public. He doesn't call hole-and-corner meetings, or give utterance to extravagant statements, or sneak away when invited to address the people! His conduct is fearless and honorable, and is, we believe, admired and approved by all fair-minded men.

We have been favorably disposed towards the proposed new city building—indeed the fact that the proposal emanates from our firemen to whom we owe much for valuable services freely rendered entitles it to the favorable consideration of every citizen. Yet we are not disposed to complain about the decision of the meeting held last evening. The present season is now far advanced, and it would be impossible, under the most favorable circumstances, to have a good brick building erected on a solid foundation and covered in by the time the snow flies. The matter has, it must be confessed, been mismanaged. The Council, with the best intentions in the world, were a little "too previous" in what they did, and left much undone that should have been done before the contract was signed. They should not have purchased a lot of land before they had ascertained for certain that they could dispose of the Fire Engine property they now possess at fair figures, and that they could remove the Silby engine from Ward One without a breach of faith or with the consent of the subscribers towards its purchase. They should certainly not have paid out $5,000 and accepted a tender without having first put the plans up to public competition and secured the advice of experienced and independent men as to the best set of plans to select. We assume that the firemen will not let this matter drop. One of the leaders among them said: "the building is required." Perhaps it will not be so much needed after the waterworks are introduced—only experience can prove that; but in any case a good central station from which the firemen can extend their operations, and at which their material can be preserved, will be wanted. Now that we have a five thousand dollar lot on our hands, we shall have to do something with it, and had better erect a good City Building. We hope, therefore, that in the "indefinite time" which must elapse, the errors of the past will be repaired,—that it can be ascertained that the Council can dispose of their Engine House property at fair prices—that the tenders for plans will be called for; that these will be carefully examined; that the best will be selected with a view to having a good building which will certainly not add to the Civic burdens. It is worthy of remark that the figures submitted by Councillor Crabbe last evening were not squarely met, nor proved to be erroneous.

Obsequies of the Late Rev. G. W. Hodgson.

ANOTHER ACCOUNT.

On Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock the Office for the Dead was sung at St. Peter's. After the lesson had been read the Rev. Charles B. Darling, the Priest in charge, delivered the following address to the sorrowing congregation:—

BELOVED,—The hour is fast approaching when the mortal remains of your respected priest are to be taken from this Church which he loved so well, to their last earthly resting place in your quiet cemetery. And it may be a source of some comfort to you who sorrow much for him, to feel at any rate that everything is being done for him in his burial as he himself would have desired. Although much to my regret, I never knew your late priest personally, yet I am told his belief in the unseen world was most vivid, and that he held with more than ordinary tenacity the doctrine of the Intermediate State and the Communion of Saints; that death in his eyes was but the surrender of the garment of pain; that the life after death is where it was before, in Christ, only in His and more immediate presence and more exalted; that from us, the departed are but "gone before," separated by a "veil"; that as yet they are not, and will not be in perfect bliss, until a time will come when in the language of the Church we with all those who are departed in the true faith of His holy name will have our perfect consummation and bliss both in body and soul in His everlasting kingdom.

He held and taught that God's word says not so much about the Day of Death as the Day of Judgment, and on the Churchyard Cross which is being made for you, the inscription chosen by him has been: "In the hour of Death, and in the Day of Judgment, Good Lord deliver us." And as he taught you to remember the faithful departed in your prayers, so you, I am sure, will so remember him. You have not forgotten those touching last words of his, I read to you on Sunday, the concluding sentence of which was: "And when I am gone from you, pray for my soul, that it may rest in peace, and be made perfect against that day." And he so earnestly requested, so I am sure, you will do, and that too, at that time, and in that place, where prayer may be so powerful, when we join in pleading the All-prevailing Sacrifice.

To-morrow morning, at 7 15, 8 15 and 9 o'clock, hours named to suit the convenience of all, that opportunity will be afforded you. His body will be brought to the Church at an early hour and be placed at the foot of the altar, at which he so often stood and gave you the Bread of Life, and prayed for you. As you go up to communicate, you will pass him by, but not him, only the poor weary body which has laid down to rest, with the tired hands folded across his breast, which never again will be lifted to bless you here on earth with those lips once so eloquent, now so silent, yet speaking to his people with the mute eloquence and emphasis of death, and then I am sure as you pray your prayer, as you ask for forgiveness, for strength, you will remember him, who was so true a Father, so kind a friend, and pray that God will grant to him eternal rest, and let light perpetual shine upon him.

At the funeral services will be sung a Hymn, which we will sing presently. It is not in your hymn book, but it was a great favorite with him. He had it printed and pasted into the Sunday School Hymn Book, and when any scholar died, then the next Sunday, the Hymn was sung by the whole school all kneeling. We will sing it now, but before doing so, I will read to you his last words once more; words which I feel sure will be valued and treasured up, and acted upon for many years to come, by his congregation:—

MY DEAR PEOPLE:—God calls me away, and the time has come, when, for a period at least, we must be separated. He only knows how deeply I have borne you in my heart—how I longed for your welfare in time and in eternity. During sixteen years I have worked among you. I hoped I might be spared yet longer in the Church of Christ on earth; but He has willed it otherwise. I humbly say: "They will be done."

I am conscious of many imperfections and shortcomings; and oh! my people, I do entreat you to pray for me—so soon to stand before my God—that He will forgive me my sins. One thing I long to say to you—I want to thank you for all your kindness and goodness to me. My last words are these: Do not be cast down if difficulties present themselves. Be of good courage, God is with His Church and will be to the end. If trials come upon you, be patient. Be diligent in prayer and in the use of all the means of grace. Love the Lord Jesus, and love one another for His sake. And when I have gone from you, pray for my soul, that it may rest in peace and be made perfect against "that day."

Yours very affectionately in Christ, GEORGE W. HODGSON.

Early on Thursday the Body was removed to the church and was placed in the Chancel. The coffin was of walnut, the lid being coped and having an oak cross its full length. At the foot was a silver plate with the following inscription: "George Wright Hodgson, Priest, departed 24th July, 1885. Aged 43 years. Jesu Mercey." Crosses and wreaths of the most beautiful flowers all hid the coffin from sight—all of them memorials from those who loved him in his life, and deeply mourned his death. Six tall tapers burned by his coffin, three on either side. The rood screen was slightly draped in black—the great mistake so often seen on occasions of this kind of over draping the church—was avoided.

Those of his congregation who were present during the many services were deeply affected as they looked at his empty stall, just behind the great brass lectern. His prayer book, surplice and stole lay there, and many a head was bowed in grief as the sense of their loss came home to them.

The Holy Eucharist was offered at 7 15 (by Archdeacon Gilpin), at 8 15 (Rev. J. A. Kaulbach), and at 9 (Rev. V. E. Harris). At 10 30 the office for the dead was sung and was immediately followed by a choral celebration of the Holy Eucharist, the officiant being the Rev. Mr. Darling. Mr. Hodgson was buried in the Church yard at his own request. When he was dying he called his dear friend, Archdeacon Gilpin, who, to his great comfort, was with him to the last, and alluding to the fact that it was usual to bury Priests in the Church near the altar, he begged that it might not be so with him. "I want to be laid to rest," he said, "in our little Church yard among my own people." Such a request was a command. Indeed, all the services and the details of every service were such as he had requested.

At 12 o'clock the funeral left the Church. The Cross-bearer and two Acolytes vested in girded albs preceded the Priest who was vested in surplice, hood, stole and biretta. The pall-bearers were six Priests, the Revs. J. A. Kaulbach, D. C. Moore, C. Wiggins, F. Murray, V. E. Harris and T. B. Reagh.

The procession was of great length, all classes of people and all denominations were represented. It was a touching sight to see the little choir boys, each with a band of crape on his left arm, following their kind Pastor and friend to his long home. At the grave the office was said by Mr. Darling. And so he was laid to rest in St. Peter's Churchyard. His grave is at the eastern end, where (the land being higher) the setting sun seems to linger lovingly. To his people that little plot of land will be more cherished spot than ever, for there rest the mortal remains of the kind friend and the faithful Pastor who loved and cared for them so well; and sure we are that as they visit that lowly grave, they will not fail to remember his last words, and pray to God to grant him eternal rest and let light perpetual shine upon him.

Picnic at the Junction.

The annual Picnic of the Sons of Temperance and their friends came off yesterday at Royalty Junction, and was in every sense a complete success. Two first-class cars, attached to Conductor Thompson's train, conveyed the party to the grounds, where they were met by Wellington Dixon, who was doing everything in his power to render the occasion a success. When tea was ready the party gathered around the well-filled tables, and joined in singing "Be present at our table, Lord," and then immediately proceeded to discuss the good things provided. The usual games of quoits, wheelbarrow race, foot race and go-as-you-please were freely indulged in, and a fine balloon ascension took place. Before returning to the city an informal meeting was convened, and was opened by singing "Hold the Fort." Addresses bearing on the good cause were given by William B. Wadman, Esq., G. W. P. of California, Rev. Job Shenton, of the Grand Division of New Brunswick, and Messrs. Millner and Chappell, of the Grand Division of this Island. Among those present we noticed Rev. S. G. Lawson, H. H. Pollard, and many other well known temperance men. W. B. Wadman above referred to, although at present residing in San Francisco, is a native of this Island, and brother to Messrs. Isaac W. Wadman and H. D. Wadman, of this city. Mr. Wadman returns to his adopted home on Monday next, whether he will carry pleasant memories of a visit to his relatives and his brethren in the Order on little Prince Edward Island.

A Royal Wedding.

BEATRICE OF ENGLAND AND HENRY OF BATTENBURG.

The marriage of Princess Beatrice, the youngest daughter of Queen Victoria, to Prince Henry of Battenburg, took place on the 23rd inst., at St. Mildred's Church, Whippingham, six miles from Osborne. The bridal procession started from the Palace at 15 minutes after one, loyal and enthusiastic shouting and cheering greeting the equipage, and as it emerged from the gate, the demonstration was taken up and continued by the people along the whole route to the Church. Five bands of music at different points on the route played at intervals. Inside the church demi-toilets were enjoined for the ladies who slept last night on the Island. Guests who arrived from London to-day, were permitted to appear in morning dress. When all was in readiness the choir, followed by the clergy, passed to the altar to prepare to receive the bride. The Queen left the Palace for the church shortly before one. The procession made an entrance into the church along a covered way through the churchyard. Equerries passed in first, then followed by foreign guests and then the royal family. When all had entered the edifice the organist played Handel's occasional overture. All Royal ladies present wore dresses of white gossamer silk. The Prince and Princess of Wales did not join in the procession. They both remained at the entrance to the church. Prince Henry wore a white uniform, and on the front of his coat were numerous orders. He passed into the church accompanied by the members of his Royal House. The arrival of the Queen with the bride was heralded with cheers and a Royal salute. The Queen entered the church on the bride's left. The Prince of Wales was on the right of the bride. The bridesmaids followed. The Princess Beatrice bowed to the guests on either side as she advanced up the aisle. The scene as the Queen, dressed in black with lace and wearing a miniature diamond crown, entered the church, was very impressive. The bride looked very pretty. She was dressed in ivory satin with honiton lace. Prince Henry stood at the south side of the altar and awaited the bride. The Princess walked with a firm step up the aisle. After the bridal chorus from Lahengrin had been played, Archbishop Canterbury read the services. The bride and bridegroom responded in clear tones, which were heard throughout the building. The Queen gave the bride away. At the close of the service an anthem by Mendelssohn was sung. The Queen, Prince Henry and relations on both sides kissed the bride, and as the bridal party left the church Mendelssohn's wedding march was played.

Princess Beatrice's bridesmaids were Princesses Louise Victoria, and Mand, of Wales; Princesses Marie and Victoria, and attendants, of Edinburgh, Princesses Irene and Alice, of Hesse, and Princesses Victoria and Louise of Schleswig Holstein. The Queen has ordered silver and bronze medals to be struck to commemorate the marriage.

A second Italian mission will start for Abyssinia in October to conclude a treaty of commerce between the two countries.

TELEGRAPHIC NEWS.

[SPECIAL DISPATCHES TO THE EXAMINER.]

Arrival Home of the Halifax Battalion.

HALIFAX, July 25.

The Halifax Battalion which has been doing duty in the Northwest for the past four months, returned home last evening. Not since the arrival of Princess Louise and Marquis of Lorne has the city looked anything like as splendid as upon the present occasion. The reception was a grand one in every respect. The train arrived at 8 o'clock, and the men marched at once to the Exhibition Building, where a magnificent supper was partaken of. The Promenade Concert was postponed on account of the lateness in the arrival of the troops.

Riel's Apostasy.

WINNIPEG, July 25.

Rev. Father Dugast has just returned from a clerical visit to Riel and the other prisoners at Regina. Riel shows the same willingness to conform to the rites of the Roman Catholic Church, and make confession; but upon the priest telling him that as he had made public an apostasy from the Church of Rome, he would now have to give him a written renunciation of such an apostasy before granting him absolution. He declined, saying that he had a mission to fulfil, and his conscience would not allow him to do so. Other prisoners who were duped by Riel, are penitent, and profess profound sorrow for their conduct.
