CO-OPERATION IN AGRICULTURE.

Co-operation seems to be one of the watchwords of the nineteenth century. Its principle is being applied to nearly every business calling. In the large cities the big departmental stores are merely a kind of huge co-operation in which one business concern by buying directly from the producer and selling to the consumer seeks to do away with the middleman's profits. Some of our western exchanges are advocating a similar line of procedure for the farmer. If, instead of having so many middlemen taking the profits of the farmer's product while in transit to the consumer, some co-operative scheme were evolved whereby the consumer could be reached more directly, more profit could accrue to the farmer.

We hardly know whether such a scheme would be the "Eldorado" some people think it or not. True it is, that at present the farmer's product before it reaches the consumer has to pass through many channels, and while en route, a large number of people come in for a share of the profit from the farmer's toil. If all the persons who figure in the concern were legitimate middlemen and only sought for an honest living, no remedy for the present unsatisfactory condition of things would be needed. But when men try to manipulate the product, as in the case of wheat, so as to make a fortune for themselves, it is perhaps time that the farmers co-operated in some way so as to reach the consumer in a more direct way. There is no doubt that if some co-operative scheme were evolved by which the profits of farm labor could be divided directly between the farmer and the consumer, we would have cheaper bread and the farmer a better living.—Farming.

ECHOES FROM MOUNT ALBION.

Klondyke is raising quite a lot of enthusiasm in this part of the country.

Quite a successful examination has recently been held in this school. A number of parents assembled, who examined the pupils in different branches, (including botany) and their answers, which were quick and accurate, shows that Mr. McEachern is doing ample justice to those who are under his tuition.

We regret to relate that Mrs. J. Wood, who for some time has been prostrated with a serious attack of illness, has not yet fully recovered. But we hope that by Divine help she may again be restored to health and strength.

We must not forget to mention that Mr. Wm. McEachern, school teacher, who has of late started a store here is, we believe, doing a fine business, and, judging by appearances, he is soon to have a partner join him in future.

LE GARCON.

OTTAWA, Jan. 10.—Hon. Mr. Patterson, tired of being pestered with customs officials seeking preferment or salary increase, has issued a warning to his officers of the inside and outside service, that the treasury minutes of 1879, referring to this matter, are still in existence, and that officers contravening it are jeopardizing their chances of promotion.

While the American bicycle rider carries his little pump either in his pocket or in the tool bag, the average European has a much larger one attached to the tubing of his frame, usually to the upper bar. The latter class carries less for appearances. But when it comes to an emergency pump up, the European has by far the easier time of it. There is room for improvement in the small pumps used in this country. Inventors seem to have neglected this branch of the industry.

QUEBEC, Jan. 10.—The papal encyclical was accompanied by a pastoral letter from Mgr. Bergin, administrator of the diocese of Quebec. The mandement praises the spirit of justice shown by a certain section of Protestants, and virtually declares war on the government, calling upon all fair-minded Protestants to assist in securing a restoration of the rights of the minority in Manitoba.

IN ABSENCE.

Watch her kindly, stars,
From the sweet protecting skies
Follow her with tender eyes,
Look so lovingly that she
Cannot choose but think of me.
Watch her kindly, stars!

See the her sweetly, night,
On her eyes, o'er-earied, press
The tired lids with light caress,
Let that shadowy hand of thine
Ever in her dreams seem mine.
Soothe her sweetly, night!

Wake her gently, morn,
Let the notes of early birds
Seem like love's melodious words.
Every pleasant sound my dear,
When she stirs from sleep, should hear.
Wake her gently, morn!

Kiss her softly, winds!
Softly that she may not miss
Any sweet, accustomed bliss.
On her lips, her eyes, her face,
Till I come to take your place,
Kiss and kiss her, winds!

ENGLAND WANTED WAR.

Held Back From Fighting France In 1893 by the German Emperor.

The Gaulois, in Paris, recently related in considerable detail that during the Siamese imbroglio of 1893 England was on the verge of declaring war against France. The power that opposed the war most vigorously was Germany. In fact, said the Gaulois, the war was prevented by the German emperor.

"At that time," said the Gaulois, "Emperor William was at Cowes with his yacht. He had won a regatta prize from Lord Dunraven's Valkyrie and the Prince of Wales' Britannia. He appeared, literally as well as figuratively, to swim in English waters. It was as he sat at dinner in the house of the Royal Yacht Squadron that he received from Count Hatzfeldt the news that the English government intended to declare war against France. The emperor rose from the table, laid aside his napkin and sent a dispatch empowering his ambassador in London to protest against Lord Rosebery's programme. Moreover, he betook himself at once to Osborne House to announce to his grandmother that he never could approve such a course as regards Siam."

Sometimes Paris newspapers publish articles on European politics that lack all foundation in fact, and the amazing story told by the Gaulois might have been dismissed as one of them had it not been confirmed at once by the Koelnische Zeitung, probably the most trustworthy journal on the European continent. The Koelnische Zeitung's Paris correspondent was at Cowes with the emperor in 1893. As soon as the Gaulois had made its statement he corroborated it. Among the L. J. Englishmen at Cowes, he said, it was then common talk that the German emperor was England's ally against Siam and France. Lord Dufferin, then English ambassador in Paris, had come to Cowes to conclude the negotiations for an alliance, but had been met with the emperor's blunt refusal to take the active part that England wished to assign him. The Koelnische Zeitung's correspondent asserts that the correctness of this statement is absolute and beyond question among the initiated who were at Cowes during the German emperor's sojourn there.

Not Tall Enough.

Just at the time when vague reports were beginning to creep abroad that Germany was meditating fresh extension of her frontier at the expense of Holland a Dutch official of high rank happened to be visiting the court of Berlin, and among other spectacles got up to amuse him a review was organized at Potsdam.

"What does your excellency think of our soldiers?" asked Prince Bismarck as one of the regiments came marching past in admirable order.

"They look as if they knew how to fight," replied the visitor gravely, "but they are not quite tall enough."

The prince looked rather surprised but made no answer, and several other regiments filed past in succession, but the Dutchman's verdict upon each was still the same, "Not tall enough."

At length the grenadiers of the guard made their appearance—a magnificent body of veterans, big and stalwart enough to have satisfied even the giant loving father of Frederick the Great, but the inexorable critic merely said, "Fine soldiers, but not tall enough."

Then Prince Bismarck rejoined: "These grenadiers are the finest men in our whole army. May I ask what your excellency is pleased to mean by saying that they are not tall enough?"

The Dutchman looked him full in the face and replied, with significant emphasis, "I mean that we can flood our country 12 feet deep."—London Tit-Bits.

Converted.

Small Boy—What'll I do with this money box?

Mamma—Put it away, of course. It has a shilling in it that your aunt gave you and some change your pa and I put in.

"Not now. There isn't any money in it now. I spent it."

"Spent it? What did you do that for?"

"Why, the clergyman preached so hard against hoarding up riches that I got converted and spent what I had."

—London Fun.

LONDON, Jan. 10.—Today the government invited tenders for India bills to the amount of one million pounds, for the discharge of bills payable on the 22nd. The stringency in money in India is so great it is believed gold shippers will be necessary.

Something Wrong.

"This coffee does not seem quite right, dear," said young Mr. Humintoon to the best little birdie in the world.

"I know it doesn't," replied his inexperienced little wife, with tears in her voice, "and I can't imagine what is the matter with it either. It is the first time I ever made coffee, dear, and I'm afraid I have done something wrong. The seeds have been boiling quite half an hour, but they just won't get soft. What do you suppose is the matter?"—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

A Machine to Test Arches.

A testing machine of wonderful power has recently been devised for the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. It is capable of exerting a pressure of 500,000 pounds. It can be applied to testing the strength of a complete arch of masonry, and it is said that similar tests on so large a scale have never before been applied.

FAMILY'S CRUEL FATE.—About twenty years ago Archibald Kennedy, a well-to-do farmer, of Glenville, Inverness County, left his native home, taking with him his family and started for the Western States. Times were good then, and intelligent, energetic men could do well in that country. But a cruel fate seemed to follow the Kennedy family. They moved from one place to another, and death was busy among them. Accidents and misfortunes followed each other quickly. The father, four sons and two daughters have died. Now, another daughter, who was burned to death in a most horrible manner is added to the dead, and the broken-hearted mother is on the verge of the grave oppressed with the weight of her sorrows.

OTTAWA, Jan. 10.—Mr. Crandall, of the department of agricultural ure, is just back from England. He says poultry shippers, by neglecting the departmental instruction to send only dressed birds, did not realize much. English consumers will not buy undressed poultry.

Although a very busy man, Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., has found time in which to write a great book of over a thousand pages, entitled The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser, in Plain English, or Medicine Simplified. Few books printed in the English language have reached so great a sale as has this popular work, over 680,000 copies having been sold at $1.50 each. The profits on this enormous sale having repaid its author for the great amount of labor and money expended on its production, he has now decided to give away, absolutely free, 500,000 copies of this valuable book, the recipient only being required to mail to the World's Dispensary Medical Association, of Buffalo, N. Y., of which company he is president, 31 one cent stamps, to cover cost of mailing only, and the book will be sent postpaid. It is a veritable medical library, complete in one volume. It contains 1008 large pages, and over 300 illustrations, some of them in colors. The Free Edition is precisely the same as that sold at $1.50, except only that the books are bound in strong manilla paper covers, instead of cloth. It is not often that our readers have an opportunity to obtain a valuable book on such generous terms, and we predict that few will miss availing themselves of the unusual and liberal offer to which we have called their attention.

He Reported.

In McClure's Magazine is told a story of an aid whom Colonel Dan Macauley sent out before a battle in the Shenandoah valley to ascertain the force of the enemy. This was the last Colonel Macauley saw of the officer. One day while Macauley was holding court in Indianapolis as mayor a one legged man came in and said, "Colonel, I have to report that I found the enemy in force." He was the captain who had been sent out to reconnoiter several years before. He had been wounded, captured and had a leg amputated and was sent to his home in Massachusetts when exchanged. Passing through Indianapolis it occurred to him that he should report to his superior officer.

In the test at the Toronto exposition the cow that gave the most milk, the most butter fat and the largest quantity of other milk solids in two days was the Holstein Carmen Sylva, with 133.25 pounds of milk, 3.849 pounds butter fat and 15.380 pounds other solids. She is owned in Ontario. The cow, however, that gave most butter fat in proportion to quantity of milk was a Jersey, Lady of Glen Rush, with 3.297 pounds butter fat from 70 pounds milk in two days.
