Junior Farmers and Junior Club News

One of the main events of the Annual Junior Farmers Field Day to be held at the Upton Experimental Farm, August 7th will be a tractor-driving competition.

This competition is made possible by the kind co-operation of the several machine company representatives in Charlottetown and vicinity who have promised to bring a tractor out to Upton Farm that day to be available to the contestants in the competition.

There will be an All-Island Chalmers, Case, Cockshutt, Farmall, Ferguson, Ford, John Deere, Massey-Harris, and Oliver tractor race. This should give each participant a chance to drive the kind of tractor he is most accustomed to handling.

The classes in the tractor driving competition are: Men—age 16 or over. Women—age 16 or over. Boys—under 16 years. Girls—under 16 years.

The following Oil companies have generously agreed to donate prize money for the Tractor-Driving Competition: B-A Oil Co.; Superline Oils; McColl-Frontenac and Imperial Oil. Two other oil companies have yet to be contacted and it is expected they will also contribute towards the prize money. Imperial Oil have further offered to put up a prize for the Grand Champion Driver.

A large number of entries is anticipated and the competition should prove a very interesting one. Among the other features of the Field Day are an Ayshire Judging Class, Poultry Judging Class, Bean Guessing Contest and Weight Guessing Contest (guessing weight of cow). A full sports program is also lined up for the afternoon and other sports events (including a bicycle driving competition) are scheduled for the evening at North River rink. Suitable prizes will be awarded to winners in each of these contests. However, the highlights of the evening's program will be a report of the year's activities from each group; a variety concert with each group contributing some number—and a big dance afterward.

All in all, indications are that the Field Day will be a bigger success than ever. It is not necessary to be in a Junior Farmers' group to attend—the Field Day is open to all rural youth. If it rains hard, come Tuesday!

At Trinity

Rev. E. Melville Aitken, B. A., B. D., is a native of Charlottetown, P. E. I. He is a graduate of Prince of Wales College, of Dalhousie University and of Pine Hill Divinity Hall. He is a veteran of the First World War, having served in the Artillery.

At the age of thirty-one he accepted a call to St. Andrew's United Church, Sydney, Nova Scotia, one of the leading churches in the Maritime Provinces. Under his leadership hundreds of new members were received, and there was a steady growth in all departments.

In 1935 he heard the call of the West, and went to Calgary to become minister of the Central United Church in that city, the most strategic church between Winnipeg and the Coast. There for seven years he carried on a far-reaching ministry, and became widely known as a radio preacher, having built up a very large radio congregation over a vast area of Western Canada, that has continued to grow steadily. During this period the congregation almost doubled its membership, reaching about two thousand members.

In 1942 he accepted a call to First United Church in Hamilton, Ontario, to become minister of one of the largest and leading churches in the United Church of Canada. In the past seven years he received into the church about fourteen hundred new members, the majority on profession of faith. The Church now has a membership of over twenty-five hundred and the givings have almost doubled in the same period of time. In Hamilton, as in Calgary, he has a large radio congregation.

Mr. Aitken is Chairman of the Presbytery, Chairman of the Missionary and Maintenance Committee of the Hamilton Conference and Chairman of the Overseas Mission Board of the United Church of Canada.

On "Now all is over, the story is told." He still carries on and one day shall conquer the world. Something was only really released then. It was only a temporary interruption and stopped nothing.

Now such experiences try us and reveal the metal out of which we are made. Moreover, they give us an opportunity of showing how we can meet the world. The stings of outrageous fortune. A man I knew missed a train one day and that changed his life and he spent the next fourteen years where he had not intended to go.

The Bible gives us an account of the interruptions that came to Jesus. One quiet night, his quiet was interrupted by the visit of Nicodemus. He often sought rest and retirement among the hills or by the lake, but on many occasions he was besieged by those in need. On another occasion when he was preaching a man in the crowd, possibly sensing that he would be a good man to intervene and so interrupted the speaker to ask him to help in the dividing of an estate.

There is a man in Camp Hill Hospital, Halifax—Walter Callow—whose career was interrupted by an accident to his aeroplane and the result is that he became blind and helpless. He has lain in the hospital for over a dozen years, but though one door closed other opened and his influence has been felt far beyond these Maritime provinces and now the Callow bus, unique of its kind, has brought cheer to many a wounded soldier and others handicapped in the race of life.

Do we not think of death as the great interrupter? And yet, Brownie puts on the lips of Pompeilia, the child wife who is dying these words: "No word begun shall ever pause for death." Is not this statement akin to that which we have in the epistle to the Hebrews—"He, being dead, yet speaketh."

Death is not the end, but opens a door and we are ushered into a new life, continuous with what we knew here. At the end, and looking death in the face, Jesus said to his disciples, looking beyond the cross—"I will see you again and he did." His enemies thought that all was over. We recall how Renan said when the cross was lifted up and Jesus there-

Thoughts For Our Time

By His Eminence Cardinal McGuigan (Copyright)

We live in times of great uncertainty, knowing not what the morrow will bring. But we do know that the lives of every one of us will be deeply affected by the turn of events in the next year or two.

In times such as these there are two ways in which we may view world events. One way is to attempt to appraise the situation by our own human powers and standards. We can calculate the probable motives of men, try to judge the strength of their military forces and their own estimate of the strength of those forces, and then judge the possibilities of peace and war and endeavour to see what best can be done to preserve peace on earth.

Such efforts are praiseworthy but they are quite insufficient. They do not take into account the one great factor that no true Christian can overlook — the Providence of God.

The events in this world do not just happen by chance. The vast universe did not come into existence by itself — it is the work of a Wise Creator. We know that He did not abandon the work of His hands. He continues to rule and to govern the universe from the course of the greatest stars to the motion of the least of the atoms. His Infinite Mind is not prevented like ours from comprehending many things at once. No detail escapes His all-penetrating gaze. He regulates at the same time and all the time the course of the universe and the lives of men. We are in His hand — He is our Father in heaven.

To be sure men do not always act according to His holy will. He has endowed man with free will which is often abused. But even in the exercise of that freedom men are subject to His Divine Providence.

God is not, He can not be the cause of evil in this world. But He does allow it in order that even from that evil good may come. So in the early history of the Church He persecuted the pagan emperors to persecute the Christians. The heroic sacrifices of so many martyrs redounded to His glory and to their own. Their good example was an inspiration to others. They were witnesses to the truth. Their blood became the "seed of Christians." As Christians in this modern world we know that it is our duty to do what we can for the cause of peace and justice on earth. Our faith in God's Providence does not slacken our efforts but rather encourages them. We know that this Providence is often accomplished through the efforts of men however inefficient they may seem, even as the early Church flourished through the heroism of its martyrs. At the same time we do not expect our own poor human foresight nor our own weak efforts alone to bring peace to the world. Indeed we are quite uncertain about the immediate success of these efforts. But however uncertain the future may be, as Christians we can face it with confidence. If we are faithful to Christ we are working for a cause which cannot fail.

But what about ourselves individually? May not all our efforts be wasted? May not our lives on earth be ruined? Yes we may have something to suffer even as the martyrs before us. That is all in the hands of our Father in heaven. One thing we know, He is a good Father and will not neglect His faithful children. Our very lives may have to be sacrificed. But if we are true friends of God, if we ever strive to fulfill His most holy will, then our own best interests will be served in the end. "To those that love God all things work together unto good." (Rom. VIII:28).

So in the midst of a troubled world let us face the future with assurance. We and our loved ones may have to suffer in this world but we have the assurance of a Christian that its Creator and All Wise Ruler has not and will never abandon it. His cause, the cause of right, must ultimately triumph. The efforts of His faithful children will not go without their reward. A purely human assurance based on strength of armies is easily undetermined. But Christian assurance is based on the wealth of the spirit and on God Himself.

He cannot fail us. It is only we ourselves who can fail Him.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of MRS. HUGH L. MACDONALD who died one year ago today. Inserted by Her Family.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of our darling daughter, Shirley Elmer, who departed this life August 6th, 1947. Beautiful memories are all we have left. Of her we loved dearly and shall never forget. Sad was the parting no one can tell. So sudden on earth the sorrow fell. Memory we treasure no one can steal. Death leaves a heartache nothing can heal. Always Remembered by Dad, Mother, Sisters and Brothers.

CARD OF THANKS

Mrs. Paul C. Stahl, Boston Mass., and Joyce MacIntyre of Mt. Stewart, wish to thank all those who sent Messages of Sympathy, Telegrams and Floral Tributes. Also all those who helped in any way during our recent sad bereavement, and especially the members of the Mt. Stewart United Church Choir.

INTERRUPTIONS

Just a rock in a stream may interrupt to a degree the flow of the water, or change the course of the current, so it is that an interruption may change a human life. There are scores of people who have in the passing of the years, happened, changed their course and are now, and have been for long, in another world, different from that in which they started. This may be caused by an illness. Perhaps they were attending college and sickness intervened and because of reduced capacity for work, or years had passed and left them older, so the college life was ended in the technical sense.

Or it may be that some were interrupted by financial readjustment. Business reverses changed the whole outlook. Perhaps the father died and the boy had to assume responsibility for the home. To see the college door closed and to turn one's back on academic life is not an easy experience. Interruptions come, arrayed in various garb and we are jostled out of our former positions.

Now such experiences try us and reveal the metal out of which we are made. Moreover, they give us an opportunity of showing how we can meet the world. The stings of outrageous fortune. A man I knew missed a train one day and that changed his life and he spent the next fourteen years where he had not intended to go.

Marrying Mark

By VIOLETTE KIMBALL DUNK

Continued

So Chiltern told him in remarkably few words, several of which bore no relation to a well trained butler at all. He wound up with the sable coat.

"I see," said Mark when he had finished. "Exactly how did you heat all this?"

"Most of it took place during lunch, sir, as to the coat, sir, I happened to be in the hall—I had work there—"

"Good," said Mark. "Always keep work about in the hall, when there are visitors, of course I mean when I'm not here."

"Yes, sir," said Chiltern. "Thank you."

"Thank you—very much." He thought of raising Chiltern's salary at once. But after all, he couldn't put a premium on snooping. He'd find a way to make it up. He looked down at Valerie in his arms. "You don't suppose—I mean, for her to go on sleeping like this—"

Chiltern bent over her. "It's all right, sir. A matter of temperament, I should say. Not very good at standing shocks—high strung. A nervous shock often sends people off. Sleep is, so to say, a kind of reaction—"

"I never thought of that. Thanks," said Mark again. "Now if you'll call Mrs. Banwood—"

But when Mrs. Banwood came hurrying up, knickered and was admitted, she found there was nothing to do. Valerie was sitting back in the cushions of the chaise longue in her own room with Mark astride, facing, at the end.

"You wanted me, Mr. Alexander?" she asked. She stooped for the black coat, which lay crumpled on the floor as if it had been dropped.
