Socialist Party In Quebec Plans Loose Ties With NDP

QUEBEC (CP) — The New Democratic Party (NDP) and the Quebec Socialist Party (Parti Socialiste du Quebec) voted overwhelmingly Sunday to remain in a provincial political party but to have loose ties with the NDP.

The NDP party was formed at the same time voted for the principle of a radically different Confederation that would give provinces most of the economic and fiscal power.

The decisions were made at the party's founding convention, held in the weekend in a smoky, rented union hall.

Michel Chartrand, 46-year-old leader of the NDP, was a prominent figure in Quebec politics, was elected leader of the party. He was unopposed.

The Socialist party developed from a split with the New Democratic party, mostly over the issue of Confederation.

The question of its ties with the NDP was debated when a move was made to break completely away from the federal party.

use of its relations with the NDP.

Gilles Rochette of Montreal declared it was "absolutely illogical" for Socialist party members to support the NDP with the two groups were in federal politics.

"The people will take us for fools," he said, "and they will be right — no one in the province of Quebec will take us seriously."

Fernand Daoust, provincial leader until Sunday, said it had been decided when the Socialist party was formed last June that each group would stick to its own level of government and would have a minimum of policies on which they could agree.

These could be disagreement, "but for us the NDP is the only worthwhile partner in Canada."

Mr. Chartrand said the party "has enough to do" in Quebec without getting involved in federal politics.

BRISTOL

Mrs. Joseph Donovan, who resided in the Charlottetown Hospital for further treatment, died last week after a long illness.

Joseph Donovan has returned from a visit to the Charlottetown Hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter O'Brien and their daughter and son-in-law were weekend visitors to the old home here, the guests of Mrs. O'Brien's sister Miss Mabel O'Brien.

Mrs. James A. O'Brien, who was born and lived here more than 80 years of her life, leaves the old home behind this week to take up residence in the Sacred Heart Home. After some delay she has accepted the offer of a room in the home, a former pastor and friend that the home would be much better for her in the winter months. Her friends will miss her in the village.

Space Scientists Plan Mars Probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. space scientists plan to take close-up pictures of the planet Mars in July, 1965, using a Mariner space craft equipped with television cameras.

Two years ago scientists hoped to land scientific instruments on the planet in an attempt to produce the first real indication whether any form of life exists on Mars.

But Dr. William H. Pickering, national president of the American Institute of Aeronautics and Astronautics, says that if any life exists on Mars, it will be in the form of micro-organisms.

Leonard Deveau has the cellar dug for his new house that will be built on a section of the old James Lambert property, where the old tenancy once stood.

Mrs. Charles Moobler, and two sons were business visitors to the city last week.

Mrs. Lester McVarish, former Bristol resident, who have been living in Borden for some years are taking up residence in Charlottetown this winter. Mr. McVarish was a mail driver here for many years, and for some years operated a packing plant in the lobster region.

The young bride was the former Miss Crane, of the Charlottetown Hospital staff. They will reside in the village as they go daily to their city employment.

Vincent McGrath the old veteran of the fishermen, is confined to his home most of the time now, owing to falling weight.

Mrs. Margaret Villard, who spent the summer here at her old home last week for Toronto, to resume her duties in that city where she makes her home now, with summer vacations here.

Welcome visitors to see this week last week were Martin Sinnott and daughter Betty from Toronto. He was on the staff of The Guardian for some years before moving to the U.S.A. and later to Toronto.

Relatives here of Mrs. Arthur Hughes, Somerville, Mass., will be sorry to hear of her serious illness after undergoing several operations.

The work of clearing away the old machinery around the burned crematorium is being done now. The new crematory will be erected on the old site.

The new high school grounds have been paved so it can easily be cleared of snow in winter and be clean and dry in the spring time.

Joe Donovan and Mrs. Joseph Sinnott are patients in the Charlottetown Hospital. Mr. Donovan has been there for quite some time following a heart attack, while Mrs. Sinnott, who has undergone surgery for the second time.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Donovan, plan to move to the city this fall to reside at Mr. Donovan will give up farming owing to ill health and turn the farm over to his son Joseph, Jr.

Most of the big potato fields here have been harvested and moved to the grading station in the city. New and modern machines gather the spuds at about one thousand bushels per day. They are graded at the warehouses at something like a car load every twenty minutes.
