Both British Parties Pledged To Similar Middle-East Policy

By ARTHUR L. GAVSHON

LONDON (AP) — Both the Conservative and Labor parties —fighting to win the Oct. 15 national election — are pledged to preserve Britain's interests in the oil-rich Middle East and to halt the Arab-Israeli arms race.

Prime Minister Sir Alec Douglas-Home's Conservatives aim at continuing Britain's 200-year-old policy of holding strategic routes and bases wherever possible throughout the region.

Harold Wilson, who would succeed Douglas-Home if Labor wins the election, favors new initiatives to extend Britain's influence in the area.

Perhaps the most striking difference in policy approach is Labor's resolve to work for the political and military neutralization of the whole Middle East.

Each party, however, has an important handicap in facing the problem of improving relations with the Arab world.

Conservatives launched the 1956 attack on the Suez Canal and in Arab eyes have not purged themselves of guilt. Labor opposed the ill-fated venture.

LABELLED PRO-ISRAELI

But Labor is firmly associated in Arab minds as Pro-Israeli. It was during the term of the first post-war Labor government of Clement (now Lord) Attlee that Palestine became Israel.

Britain's vital interests in the Middle East, accepted with varying degrees of emphasis by Douglas-Home and Wilson, include: Access to oil, peace and stability and a staging post on the route to the Far East.

Their essential disagreement lies in how each would safeguard these interests.

Conservatives have traditionally held that the use of force is justified to protect huge oil investments.

Labor's policy states: "Our oil supplies should be guaranteed through commercial arrangements rather than through the use of threat of force."

Where Conservatives place great importance on preserving a balance of arms between Arab and Jew, Wilson takes a more radical approach. In an interview he stated that Labor, in co-operation with the mid - eastern states and other non-arms concerned, aims to take the area "out of cold war politics" and to work for an arms cutback. He suggested that the United States, Britain and France, together with Russia, should join in guaranteeing the existing frontiers of Mid - Eastern states, including Israel, subject only to agreed adjustments. He called for a ban on nuclear weapons in the area.

Sir Alec Says Socialism Would Mean British Ruin

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN

LONDON (CP)—Prime Minister Sir Alec Douglas-Home said here socialism would ruin Britain—and he advised voters to study what has happened in the Soviet Union.

Douglas - Home carried his campaign for the Oct. 15 general election into Bradford, near Leeds in Britain's textile belt, while Harold Wilson, Labor party leader, addressed a meeting in industrial Coventry.

As new heat developed in the somewhat lacklustre campaign, both party chiefs concentrated on Britain's economic situation. But their assessments were so different they sounded like men describing opposite ends of the universe.

Sir Alec spoke acidly of socialism, although saying he was not impugning the sincerity of the "socialist leaders—they believe in socialism."

"The trouble is socialism would ruin Britain. . . . It is a policy followed by none of the chief countries whose competition we must meet and beat if we are to go on prospering in a highly competitive world.

"The country which really experimented with it is Russia and having learnt their lesson they now are galloping back to the system of enterprise and reward. So before casting a vote for socialism everyone must realize what is at stake."

Wilson, hammering on Labor's theme of a new scientific Britain, scored "educational separatism and apartheid" which he said resulted in a "closed shop" in the higher echelons of British industry.

"Too much of the nation's business is run on the same basis as the Conservative government — with a non - playing captain," Wilson said in a scornful reference to Sir Alec.

"British industry faces the competition of a world of ruthless professionals. You will not meet that challenge if Britain's young and unrivalled engineers, and scientists and technologists, designers and craftsmen, production engineers and industrial administrators, are forever held down and frustrated by the boards of directors, far too many of whom owe their place to family, social and school connections."

Dominion Coal Reports Loss

MONTREAL (CP)—Dominion Coal Co. Ltd., reported today a loss of $1,297,076 for the year ended July 31, compared with a 1963 profit of $1,141,041.

Company President J. E. Clubb said the deficit was due to a production drop to 3,068,831 net tons from 3,308,242 in 1963. Net tons sold dropped to 3,233,525 from 3,552,116 in 1963.

He attributed the loss to "unprecedented difficult underground conditions" complicated by winter storms and a strike which caused a two - week shutdown.

The company is a partly-owned subsidiary of Dominion Steel and Coal Corp. Ltd., but accounts are not consolidated with those of Dosco.

T. J. Emmert, Dosco chairman and president, said "the loss sustained by the coal company will have no effect on the earnings position of Dosco."

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By B. JAY BECKER

South dealer.

Both sides vulnerable with a part score of 30 for north - South.

	♣1094

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1♠	Pass	2♠	Pass
2♥ (!)

Opening lead—two of clubs.

Truth is stranger than fiction, they say, and here is a tale to bear out the legend.

The hand occurred in a rubber bridge game. The stakes were high, the atmosphere tense, and all the players except South were first-rate.

North had been having a tough time all evening, largely because he had cut South as a partner most of the time. So when he heard South open the bidding with a diamond, he cheered up considerably, since it looked as though he was about to win a rubber at long last. He responded two spades.

South now bid two hearts when his partner's jump raise called attention to the insufficient bid and offered to explain the options South could exercise, but South, looking at his score pad, brushed him aside, saying, "It's all right. I bid three diamonds. We have game and forty."

North groaned and said, "We happen to have game and thirty, for your information, and furthermore, you've now succeeded in barring me from the bidding. Can't you even keep score correctly?"

So the outcome was that South wound up playing the hand at three diamonds, making seven, and, of course, the opponents won the rubber on the next deal.

If South had corrected his insufficient bid to three hearts, there would have been no penalty and a successful slam might eventually have been reached. An insufficient bid made sufficient in the same suit carries no penalty.

When North explained this, South replied, "Well, I've already told you several times I thought we had forty on and I thought I was making a game bid, and besides, I wouldn't dream of bidding three hearts with a four-card suit!"

Aside from what happened, the hand is a curiosity in other respects. Strangely enough, as the cards happen to lie, North-South could have made a grand slam in spades, hearts, diamonds, clubs or notrump!
