Catholic Mission Of St. James At Springfield (Formerly Freetown)

The districts which first constituted this mission were Emerald, Freetown, Summerside, Irishtown and Park Corner. The mission as it now exists was formed in 1865 from portions of the parishes of St. Mary's, Indian River and St. Malachy. Kinkora, although long prior to that date there was a little church in the district of Park Corner, which is known to history as the "Irishtown Church." In the year 1828, Bishop MacDonald, then priest in charge of the western section of Prince Edward Island, purchased an acre of land from one, Charles Doyle of Park Corner, and built a chapel upon it, and consecrated a cemetery. In that chapel Father MacDonald held a station twice a year and the custom was followed by his successors until the year 1855, when Father James MacDonald, then priest in charge of Indian River and the adjoining missions, sold the chapel to one, James Doyle, who pulled it down and built himself a dwelling house with the scantling and lumber. This transaction closed the history of the Irishtown Church.

In the year 1918, Bishop Henry J. O'Leary decided that the time had come to make Summerside a parish with a resident priest. Accordingly Msgr. D. J. Gillis began the erection of a parish rectory. This rectory was completed by Rev. Francis McQuaid in 1919, after his appointment as pastor of the new parish. The old church erected in 1865 was now too small and instead of enlarging it, the pastor, at that time (1923) Rev. Francis MacDonald and his congregation decided to build a new and larger church. Funds were accumulated for several years and in 1928 the corner stone was laid. Father "Frank" wanted a beautiful and suitable rural church and that is what he built as most will agree.

On the 27th of October 1929, the fully completed church, dedicated to Saint James, the Apostle, was blessed by Rt. Rev. J. C. MacLean, P. A. V. G., after celebrating Solemn High Mass with Reverend Daniel P. Croken as deacon, Rev. Dr. Bernard J. Gillis as sub-deacons and Rev. James A. Murphy as Master of Ceremonies. A sermon
