U.K.'s Tax Increases Hit Low-Wage Groups

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN

LONDON (CP)—The Conservative government's budget increases on tobacco and alcohol once more increased the tax burden on low-wage earners, Labor party spokesman James Callaghan said Wednesday.

Callaghan charged the budget speech of Chancellor of the Exchequer Reginald Maudling Tuesday continued a Tory 12 year trend toward putting the tax load on the backs of individual taxpayers rather than on dividends and profits.

Labor's shadow chancellor, Callaghan spoke in the House of Commons and later said on television that Labor—if elected in next autumn's election — would revise the whole tax structure to hit harder at profits, capital gains, speculators and land exploiters.

Only his party could succeed with the incomes policy needed to provide a fair wage for workers and a fair profit for capital while continuing Britain's expansion, Callaghan declared.

Tax receipts from individuals had more than doubled since the Tories came to power, said Callaghan. Meanwhile receipts from companies, including profits tax, went up only 27 per cent and on capital 37 per cent.

TURNED BACKS ON CHARGE

Callaghan said the Conservatives had turned their backs on the basic principle that taxation should be based on the ability to pay.

A married man with two children and an annual income of £2,000 ($6,000) now pays only 7.6 per cent of his salary in direct taxation compared with 15.9 per cent by a man with a similar family earning £12 a week, Callaghan added.

Callaghan criticized defence expenditures, which Maudling plans to increase by nine per cent.

He also told the Commons the creation of publicly-owned factories and the control of imports are two ways to curb the growth of Britain's economy.

Callaghan noted British imports had risen twice as fast as exports in previous years They were paced by the import of finished goods which were up by as much as 16 per cent.

He suggested a number of ways of establishing industries in Britain to compete with imports but said if this did not do the trick and the country looked like it was being engulfed by a flood of imports no statutory grounds should prevent control.

Callaghan, who is favored to become treasury chief if Labor wins the general election this fall, said other ways to help Britain's growing trade gap would be to set up an export consortia to help small firms to launch a government inquiry into how to make exports more profitable and for the government to conduct market research, making the results available to industry.

SHARES RISE

Meanwhile, shares on the London Stock Exchange rose by up to one shilling (14 cents) in most sections of the market following the easy-going budget proposals.

Buyers were encouraged by the mildness of the brake Maudling proposed to put on the nation's booming economy with only £100,000,000 ($300,000,000) in new taxes.

Most of the new revenue was to come from a 10-per-cent increase in drink and tobacco taxes, but even tobacco stocks rose on the London Exchange.

However, despite the buoyant mood on the stock exchange, other British reaction in the budget was neither highly enthusiastic nor highly critical.

The most general assessment was it was an honest budget for an election year—one which did not declare slashing tax cuts in order to persuade people to vote for the Conservative party.

Another Train Robber Caught

AYLESBURY (Reuters) — A 12th man was found guilty here Wednesday of taking part in the great mail train robbery last August near this English town.

The jury convicted Ronald Arthur Biggs, 34, on both charges of conspiring to rob the mail and of taking part in the robbery, in which about $7,200,000 in cash was taken from the train by armed men.

Sentence on Biggs, who pleaded not guilty to both charges, was postponed.

Eleven other men already have been found guilty on charges arising out of the holdup and are also awaiting sentence.

Teacher Found Shot-To-Death

NEW YORK (AP)—A Columbia University teacher - researcher in nuclear physics, with a brilliant academic background, was found shot to death shortly after dawn Wednesday in a clump of shrubbery in Central Park.

Police called the death of Charles Gallagher Jr., 31, a homicide. There was no immediate suggestion of a motive.

The gun that killed him was missing.

Investigators sought to determine whether there was any link between Gallagher's atomic work and his slaying. Only a few hours before his death, he had been doing research work at Brook-haven National Laboratory, a U.S. Atomic Energy Commission centre on Long Island. However, officials said there was nothing secret about the work and it was in an area in which the U.S. exchanges information with Russia.

Gallagher apparently entered the park Tuesday night. Most New Yorkers shun the area after dark as a dangerous green jungle, infested with muggers, perverts and other criminals.

Gallagher left his home at 8 P.M. Tuesday, telling his wife, Kristin, he would be home late. They have two sons, Steve, 4, and Mike, 2.

Lillian Reis Found Guilty

POTTSVILLE, Pa. (AP) — Lillian Reis, attractive former night club owner and show girl, was found guilty Tuesday of conspiracy in the bizarre burglary of the home of John B. Rich, Pottsville coal firm president.

A jury of eight women and four men deliberated seven hours and five minutes before convicting the shapely Philadelphia twist-dance specialist. Her counsel, Robert Simone, immediately moved for a new trial.

Miss Reis was accused of masterminding the August, 1959, burglary that police claim netted approximately $472,000. The victim has insisted his loss was $20,000 in jewelry and cash.

Since Miss Reis and seven others were arrested in the case, two men have been murdered, three convicted and another is yet to be tried.

This was Miss Reis' second trial, her first ending in a hung jury after 16½ hours of deliberation. Judge Charles Staudenmeier in Schuylkill County Court postponed sentencing until after he rules on Simone's motion for a new trial. Maximum sentence is 15 years in prison.

RIPLEY'S BELIEVE IT OR NOT

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By B. JAY BECKER

QUIZ

Partner bids One Heart, next player passes, both sides vulnerable. What would you now bid with each of the following five hands?

1. ♠KQ872 ♥J843 ♦J6 ♣52
2. ♠97643 ♥7 ♦J82 ♣AK96
3. ♠J53 ♥AJ7642 ♦5 ♣AKJ
4. ♠964 ♥J86532 ♦— ♣KJ73
5. ♠Q ♥K97542 ♦8 ♣KQJ86

1. Two hearts. The best thing to do is give the heart raise right away and get off the hook. If you responded one spade, you would be in an awkward position later if partner's rebid were two hearts. In that case it would be difficult to decide whether to raise to three hearts, which would constitute an overbid, or whether to pass and suppress the heart support.

The easiest way of avoiding this dilemma is to raise to two hearts, showing heart support and 6 to 9 points. Partner will then be in a position to decide how far to go.

2. One spade. Certainly this is not a very good suit, but the spade response is more apt to lead to the right contract than any other bid. The chief reason for naming the suit is that there is a reasonable possibility of partner's having three spades, in which case a playable trump suit will have been found.

Contrary to common conception, the response of one of a suit does not promise more than 6 points. True, a suit response may be made with a hand containing, say, 10 or 15 points, but it still does not guarantee more than 6 points.

3. Three clubs. The jump-shift to three clubs is the only safe way of alerting partner to the possibility of a slam. The intention is to raise hearts when partner rebids. Although the hand looks slammish, it is far from certain that twelve tricks can be made. All we can do at this point is put partner on notice that the possibility exists.

4. Four hearts. This is a preemptive bid, pure and simple, the prime purpose being to shut the opponents out of the bidding. There is a grave danger that the opponents can make ten or eleven tricks with their best suit as trump, and the hope is that the leap to four hearts will succeed in silencing them. At the same time, there is a reasonable chance that four hearts can be made.

5. Four notrump. The number of aces partner has will clearly determine how many tricks can be made. If partner responds to the Blackwood bid with five spades (showing three aces), you bid six hearts. If he shows hearts; if he shows four aces, you bid a grand slam.
