"Great Leap Forward" Is Seen In China's Surging Industry

By JOHN RODERICK

TOKYO (AP)—Mao Tze-tung coined the phrase "a great leap forward" to describe Communist China's 1958 surge toward the front ranks of industrialization.

Today "the great leap forward" slogan has been replaced by one of desperation. It is "rescue food from the mouth of the dragon," the cry of the Chinese peasant as he tries to wrest a good harvest from the reluctant land.

Thousands of refugees storming the gates of Hong Kong in June are witnesses to the failure of "the great leap forward."

The failure has left China a land of hunger, hard times and malaise.

Peking now is jittery, a fact which indicates possible low morale, uncertainty and fear in a once-confident leadership.

Mao, chairman of the Chinese Communist party, dreamed four years ago of pushing his backward country from fuedalism into the 20th century almost overnight.

He mowed 500,000,000 peasants out of agricultural co-operatives and put them in 26,000 farm communes, one of the greatest mass movements in human history.

CHERISHED IMAGE

Through his life of struggle, Mao, now 68, has displayed a peculiar Chinese characteristic: infinite patience.

Not once, but many times, he said to this writer that communism woul be a slow, patient process for China, one in which controlled capitalism and agricultural co-operatives would exist for a long time.

Following this policy, the progress of the first eight years of communism had been steady and impressive. The countryside yielded record crops, industry was beginning to emerge, the 48-hour week had been introduced for the laborer and the standard of existence had inched upward.

Suddenly, with bewildering speed, he tore up the blueprint and gambled away all these gains on a single throw of the dice.

From the outset, his new plan ran into opposition—Intellectuals, students, even members of the armed forces.

Soviet Premier Khrushchev was appalled by Mao's commune plan. Khrushchev saw it as a latter-day version of Russia's own new economic plan of the 1920s that resulted in the death of millions of land-owning Kulaks and made scars in Soviet agriculture that continue to plague Russia today.

The quarrel has, over the years, deepened and festered.

FALSE RESULTS

Mao wanted results and he got them—or so it seemed. The farmers were set to work tilling their fields by day and working home-made iron blast furnaces by floodlight at night.

The official figures published for 1958 boasted of 11,080,000 tons of steel produced, 373,000,000 tons of grain harvested.

The truth was bitterly different.

Harried cadres, anxious to prove the greatness of the plan, had exaggerated or falsified facts. Weary peasants, disillusioned by the loss of their lands, refused to work, abandoned their livestock.

The pace left worker and peasant exhausted and dispirited.

To cap it all, nature struck with terrible destruction, flooding the lands, parching them with drought, denuding them with insect plagues.

Mao had no alternative but to admit that the 1958 figures were catastrophically wrong: only 8,000,000 tons of steel, only 250,000,000 tons of grain.

To arrest the downhill plunge, Mao ordered millions of city dwellers out of the factories and onto the farms, leaving the new industrial complexes silent, uninhabited shells.

FIGURES ARE SECRET

The struggle to recover from the shocks of 1958, 1959 and 1960 has proceeded in grim silence. No figures have been released to the Chinese or to the world.

Starvation apparently now has receded. But hunger, hard times and unemployment remain. The Communist leaders now admit the healing process will be long and arduous.

New light has been thrown on actual conditions then and today, by Toshio Takano, a 44-year-old Japanese military policeman turned automobile mechanic. Returning to Japan in June with his Chinese wife and six children after 25 years on the mainland, he said in an interview whole villages died of starvation during the "great leap forward."

He recalled that up to 1957 "we could buy rice and clothing freely." His salary of 95 yuan ($39.50) a month was adequate for his then-small family.

As the great leap developed, Takano and the 400 mechanics and 600 truck drivers in his state-run plant at Chan Chiu in Honan province, found themselves working 16 hours every day.

In 1958, communes were introduced in the cities. But in 1960 Takano was offered the chance to leave them. He and 70 per cent of the city's Chinese did, he said.

But not everything in Mao's China is black. Public hygiene, he said, is better than under the nationalists. So are transportation, hospital care — which is free—education and rents. He paid two yuan—less than $1—for two rooms and a kitchen without running water.

Public morality has improved, also, and there is less police brutality, less quarrelling and almost no official corruption, Takano said.

"There is absolutely no possibility of a successful revolt against the government," he added.

Signs Of Revolt Are Observed In Sweltering Middle East

By GEORGE McARTHUR

BAGHDAD (AP)—In sweltering Iraq, diplomats mop their brows and wonder how long strongman Abdel Karim Kassem can defy political gravity and maintain control of this historic land that sweeps up from the Persian Gulf.

With guns or words, Kassem is fighting a Kurdish revolt, imperialism, the Arab League, the Western-owned Iraq Petroleum Company, Kuwait, Egypt's President Nasser and Israel.

Four years ago Kassem overthrew King Feisal and turned street mobs loose to dismember Premier Nuri Es Said. Now his uneven smile gleams from portraits everywhere. A visitor counted 18 in Kassem's own reception room.

He drives through the streets in a bullet-proof sand-yellow Cadallac. Increasingly he depends on police state measures at home and on Moscow abroad. He caters to his army with housing schemes and Moscow weapons.

LAND REFORM

He has tried to woo the peasants with land reform—but the scheme is only beginning to feebly right itself after two years.

Actual farm income has dropped and Iraq buys wheat abroad.

It is accepted in Baghdad—despite Kassem's frequent contrary claims — that rebelling Kurds control much of the countryside in the north. No travel permits are issued for that area.

His claims against Kuwait in the south have alienated other Arab states and caused him to ask the recall of U.S. Ambassador John Jernegan after Washington recognized Kuwait's independence.

Despite the efforts of a minister of guidance and a controlled press, the 7,000,000 citizens show a notable lack of enthusiasm for Kassem.

Kassem governs largely through four trusted army cronies—the heads of military intelligence, military police, internal security and the army itself. He has promised elections for 1963.

ECONOMY STAGNATES

Although the police state regime makes the population restive, economic problems are likely to prove more troublesome in the long run. In concentrating on survival, Kassem has allowed the economy to stagnate, despite a massive income from oil.

Inflation is creeping in and the cost of living is going up.

The Soviet bloc has given him about $230,000,000 in credits for his five-year industrial plan, ending in 1966. It includes factories that will help the economy marginally, while committing Kassem to Moscow for spare parts, technicians and further financing.

He must also pay back to Moscow some $400,000,000 in military credits—for which he has received a vast stock of tanks, trucks and artillery plus a jet air force that lacks the MiG-21 Nasser has.

Kassem leans heavily on the $250,000,000 he receives annually in oil revenues. This sum also must serve his domestic economy and help pay the $100,000,000 defence budget.

This is one reason Kassem is trying to pressure the Iraq Petroleum Company into raising payments, and why he also wants the oil-rich kingdom of Kuwait.

St. John Editor Dies Tuesday

SAINT JOHN, N.B. (CP)—John G. Bruce, associate editor of the Telegraph-Journal and the Times-Globe, died today following a heart attack suffered during the night. He was 65.

A New Brunswick newspaperman for 40 years and associate editor of the two Saint John papers since 1955, he was an expert in the province's politics, history and geography.

In 1933 he was one of three newspapermen who discovered the Magnetic Hill near Moncton and gave it the early publicity which turned it into a major tourist attraction.

Born in Campbellton, N.B., he served overseas during the First World War and then graduated as an electrical engineer from the University of New Brunswick. He worked for the Fredericton Gleaner before moving to Saint John in 1927.

He is survived by his wife, the former Myra G. Slack, of Ottawa. There are no children.

Funeral arrangements have not been completed.
