Actor Is Fat And Likes It

By BOB THOMAS
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Actor Walter Slezak stands out as a monument to good eating.

At 270 pounds, he is fat and likes it. This may come as a shock to the melba toast nibblers and the shortcake shunners, but it's true.

"I simply like the good things in life too much," he explained. "And that means eating and drinking. Oddly enough, I am an erratic eater during the day. I may have just a bite for breakfast and catch a fast lunch. But dinner—ah! That is when I lose my head."

"I also like to drink, though I never get drunk. I always eat when I drink—perhaps that is the secret. I have a couple of highballs before dinner and a bottle of beer or two with it."

HEARTY LUNCH
Slezak interrupted rehearsals to enjoy a hearty lunch: Bloody mary, chicken liver omelette, etc.

"Seven calories," he said, holding up a whole-wheat cracker before popping it into his mouth. "You see, I know the calorie count of every item of food. But I don't let it bother me."

"Oh, I used to hold my weight down. When I was a leading man in Europe I once went to a Swiss sanatorium because I felt I should be slimmer. They took the weight off scientifically and I dropped to 165 pounds."

"But when I came out I was like a lion, snarling at everyone. Since reducing diet that to me, I said to hell with it, let it spread. I got fat and I've been finding roles steadily for the past 15 years."

Don't his doctors urge him to reduce?
SOME PENALTIES
"Of course. Every one of them does. They say I will live longer if I take off weight. And I must pay about seven per cent more in insurance premiums, which would be reduced if I became 50 pounds lighter for six months."

"But I think they are sticking blindly to statistics. I've known a lot of fat men who have lived to be 70 and 80 years old and a lot of skinny ones who have died young."

"My theory is that tension and frustration can do more to shorten your life than weight. I've seen too many people become miserable because they constantly watched their weight. That's not for me."

His theory holds true in at least one notable Hollywood example: Judy Garland. She had confessed that constant efforts to curtail her waistline helped make her a nervous wreck.

U. S. Senators Told Russian Army Equipment Is Superior

WASHINGTON (AP) — Deputy defence secretary Donald A. Quarles told senators the Russians have superiority in equipment for their ground forces.

Quarles' testimony, taken behind closed doors by the Senate's preparedness subcommittee and released Monday, indicated a new field in which the United States may be lagging behind Russia.

The subcommittee previous heard statements that the Soviets are ahead in long-range missiles and satellite development.

Questioned by Edwin L. Weisl, subcommittee counsel, about Russian possession of what he called "ramjet artillery," Quarles said Russia has shown she is "very advanced" in equipping her ground forces.

GENERAL SUPERIORITY

"Art In The Red" Angers Britain's Angry Young Men

By ALAN HARVEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer LONDON (CP) — Sounds of jangling discord from Britain's cultural circles suggest that 1958 will be another vintage year for the Angry Young Men.

New works by Kingsley Amis and John Osborne, two charter members of the malcontent school of writing will add to the post-war chorus of disenchanting rumbles which undoubtedly will be heard over the financial impoverishment of the arts.

Perhaps some celebrated performer, with a taste for the theatrical, will parade through London streets seeking aid for the arts, as happened in 1957, or make an impromptu speech in the House of Lords, as Actress Vivien Leigh did in a bid to save the St. James's Theatre from conversion into a prosaic offices.

"The theme of 'Art in the Red' was sounded most compellingly in a report of that title issued in October by Britain's Art Council. It acknowledged government support of nearly £1,000,000 in a year, but said the figure would have to be raised by a quarter to overcome the 'chronic crisis' in the arts."

In 12 months, it said, two symphony orchestras barely escaped dissolution, the two national opera houses had heavy overdrafts and theatres were closing "all over the country." The Royal Ballet and the Old Vic Company made ends meet only with the aid of North American tours.

"This insecurity is not due to public indifference," said a summary of the report. "Television has had no appreciable effect on attendances. The audience for the arts in this country is a very large and appreciative one."

Theatrical producer Basil Dean, writing in the Manchester Guardian agreed that the crisis in the theatre was a financial one. Drama schools were teeming with youngsters of talent and promise, while audiences were holding up well. Despite these factors, Dean said, "the theatre in Britain is passing through an acute crisis, perhaps the greatest in its history."

In the literary world, there were fewer financial worries but there was something of the same troubled spirit. The cult of the Angry Young Men, a label loosely draped over a horde of youthful writers, continued to flourish with the appearance of Osborne's second play, The Entertainer, which proved as successful a vehicle for Sir Laurence Olivier, in the role of the seedy vaudeville performer, as the playwright's first work, Look Back in Anger, proved for actress

Nobody could define the Angry Young Men with any precision and several writers sought to associate themselves with the movement, which had in common a restless discontent with the things they are. Some called them the welfare state school.

A newcomer to the ranks of the malcontents was a librarian whose first book, Rain at the Top, was well received. At with most of his contemporary writers, Braine showed a preoccupation with Britain's changing class structure in a book which pulled no punches.

Cashing in on the current literary movement, an enterprising publisher asked a group of young men and women associated with the school to describe their attitudes in a book called Postmodernism. Typical of the approach shown was that of Doris Lessing at 38 the oldest of the group.

"British life at the moment," she wrote, "is petty and frustrating."

Politically, it was a quiet year on the intellectual front. The revolt which followed the Anglo-French intervention in Suez ended after the abortive campaign, and political apathy stole back into the universities.
