Stricken earlier in the day, medical aid was summoned and a nurse quickly brought, but the Divine Healer alone could help and his gentle spirit went home in the late afternoon hours. He was 46 years of age.

Always of a very alert and energetic nature, he toiled unceasingly to provide the comforts of a home, where he was a devoted husband and father, and yet was never too busy or weary to assist those where sickness or infirmity laid a hand.

His unflinching good humor and charitable opinion of others along with his exemplary way of living won for him the respect and admiration of many who will long cherish memories of him.

In the Albany United Church where he attended since its inception, he served humbly as Elder, assisting also in the choir and in various duties that fell to those interested and willing to help.

He is survived by his wife, the former Hilda Foy of Tryon; two sons, Clarence and Carman; also four daughters, Helen, Lera, Marion, and Hazel.
