FOLLOWS FAMILY TRADITION

A swearing-in ceremony of a new recruit for the Royal Canadian Navy on board HMCS Queen Charlotte yesterday turned out to be a real family affair, when a father administered the oath of allegiance to his son. Here, the RCN recruiter, Chief Petty Officer Joseph Paquet, left, witnesses the ceremony as the father, Lieutenant Eldon A. Darrach, staff officer at the local naval division, swears in his son, who now become Ordinary Seaman Aubrey Darrach. The young seaman leaves this morning for HMCS Cornwallis, near Digby, N.S., where he will undergo a 16-week indoctrination course.

New Magazine Subscriptions Proposed By Home & School

The regular monthly meeting of the P.E.I. Federation of Home and School executive held recently in Charlottetown was presided over by M. F. Hagan.

Col. Leo MacDonald, provincial chairman of the school lit. committee, reported on a recent meeting held with the principals of the regional high schools of the province, when the special needs and interests of high schools were discussed in relation to the Home and School program.

Robert Donnelly, the newly appointed chairman of the provincial audio - visual committee, was warmly welcomed by the executive and a lively discussion took place on audio - visual materials available for Home and School programs.

Mr. Hagan said that if had been suggested by the Canadian Federation and warmly endorsed by the provincial presidents, that an effort be made to place the new magazine, Quest (which serves as a spotlight on education) in the teacher's room of every school in Canada where there is a Home and School association. It was further suggested that perhaps the local associations of Home and School might consider donating a subscription to the teachers of their school. Quest would be a meaningful, yet inexpensive gift to the teachers that could not fail to have a favourable influence on staff relations, as well as it would bring contributions from many of the best educational minds.

It was further pointed out that "Quest" provides excellent material for program planning in the local association. Special subscriptions are available in group memberships often at half price until March 31.

CANADIANS

Col. Woodcock said his battalion's communications are carried on in French but that it does not foresee any language difficulties. The Cypriots speak English but no French. The colonel said one-third of his 950 men speak no English but that each patrol will include at least some English - speaking members.

NOT ENOUGH FLAGS

The patrols will fly one large UN flag, Col. Woodcock said. The UN hasn't supplied enough flags yet for all vehicles.

More tents are being put up at the camp, held up by stakes driven into solid rock. The Canadians still are wearing battledress but will switch to bush clothing in April.

Col. Woodcock said the battalion has steel helmets but likely will wear UN blue berets all the time.

Col. Woodcock said all his men are still confined to camp except those who have to go on duty outside.

"We fit in well anywhere," Col. Woodcock said. "We make friends over a glass of beer or wine. We are as much ambassadors as soldiers on a job like this.

FEARS DRIVERS

"I am more afraid now of losing a man by his driving on the wrong side of the road than from a bullet."

Col. Woodcock said the battalion is studying cap badges so that they will be able to distinguish between Greek and Turkish police.

He said his battalion will be fully ready for operations by Sunday night or Monday. The last 32 soldiers will arrive Sunday by RCAF airlift.

"I think we could operate alone as the UN force," he said.

centennial year when we will welcome again another great Queen with affection and with honor."

MATHESON AGREES

Mr. Matheson said "I am sure I speak for all our citizens in expressing delight that Her Majesty and Prince Philip will visit here. On two previous visits here they won our hearts. It is appropriate that the Queen will be with us in Centennial Year and Sir John A. Macdonald and his colleagues could be here, they would be happy with this royal recognition of their work."

Provincial Secretary J. David Stewart, who said he is chairman of a committee that is planning the program for the royal visit, said it is fitting that Her Majesty, who is also Queen of Canada, will officiate at the opening of the building that is the memorial to the meeting of the Fathers of Confederation. "The visit," he said, "will be a proud moment for Canada and for Prince Edward Island."

Hays Suggests Education Tax

REGINA (CP) — Agriculture Minister Harry Hays has suggested establishment of a provincial sales tax for education to meet the spiralling costs faced in most provinces. The minister, speaking to the annual meeting of the Saskatchewan Association of Rural Municipalities, said present methods of finaancing education "are proving unsatisfactory and far too great a burden on local governments."

"I am convinced that the burden of financing education must be removed from the municipal level of government and be supported by a much broader taxation base.

"A five per cent education tax for the most part, on all retail sales, would have, in most provinces in 1962, paid 60 per cent of the education bill," he said.
