DEFYING LAW ON A RAFT.

How the Sheriffs of Two Counties Were Outwitted.
A snug little white house on a raft is still to be seen moored to the shore of Pontoosuc lake, in the Berkshire hills. It has been famous in its time, but its active career is over, and the fun loving youth of the neighborhood look regretfully upon its quiet retirement. It was the property of a man who a few years ago plied a brisk trade in retelling liquors without a license. The portable nature of his saloon and a geographical peculiarity in the situation of the sheet of water upon which it floated enabled him to carry on his trade in merry defiance of the authorities.
Pontoosuc lake lies partly in the township of Pittsfield and partly in the adjoining one of Lanesboro. J.'s "float," as it was everywhere known, was always kept near the dividing line, and was the most popular rendezvous in the two townships for those of a convivial nature. Sharp eyed and quick eared sentinels were continually on the watch, however, and at the first breath of warning of the approach of the sheriff of Pittsfield the float, if it chanced to be on that side, was speedily sculled or poled over into Lanesboro. There the baffled Pittsfield officer might gaze at it to his heart's content, but it was beyond his jurisdiction. In the same way the sheriff of Lanesboro found that the float successfully eluded all his most vigorous attempts to surprise it on his side of the line. Each officer was so anxious to make the capture in his own township that the rivalry was spirited and the float led a life of excitement. But this same rivalry between the sheriffs was also its protection, for their professional jealousy of each other prevented them from trying the clearly feasible plan of joining their forces and running the float down into one township or the other.
After a few seasons of this life J. retired from it, doubtless with a comfortable competency and a feeling of satisfaction at the series of adventures from which he had always emerged as the victor.—New York Tribune.

His Cause For Regret.

An old Scotchman who had been a long time in the colonies paid a visit to his "native glen," and, meeting an old schoolfellow, they sat down to have a chat about old times and acquaintances. In the course of conversation the stranger happened to ask about a certain Georgie McKay.
"He's dead long ago," said his friend, "and I'll never cease regretting him as long as I live."
"Dear me! Had you such a respect for him as that?"
"Na, na! It wasna' only respect I had for himsel', but I married his widow."—Strand Magazine.

An Impatient Guest.

At one of the Mackinac hotels, loved by its frequenters for its associations, in spite of lax management, a new guest demanded a bath.
"My dear sir," said the proprietor, "next year we shall have two of the finest and best equipped bathrooms on the island."
"But," objected the guest, "I want a bath this year."—Chicago Post.
