

DOWN THE BACK STRETCH

Urban Gills, Misouche, has sold a full sister of Donald G.R. 2.06 2/5, to Weldon M. Fleming of Juniper, N.B. Both are out of Helen D. 2.11 1/4 by Atlantic Express 2.07 1/4, dam, Miss Azoff 2.13 1/4 by Azoff, and were sired by Calumet Budlong 2.02 1/4. Helen D. is also the dam of Eleanor G. 2.10 2/5, Betty G. R. 2.12 1/5 and F. T. E. 2.13 1/5 trotting, all sired by Calumet Budlong. Helen D. was a really good trotter. She took her record in a well contested race at Old Home Week, Charlottetown, in 1937, driven by Clarence Schuman.

Donald G. R. was purchased by Mr. Fleming right after his memorable race at Old Home Week, Thursday afternoon, August 18, 1949. He was given an outside chance to win that race and only finished sixth in the first heat which was won by Mae Josedale, driven by Angle Allen, in 2.12. It was a dull afternoon and the track was a bit heavy so that time was really good. Abner Britton went into the lead in the second heat but it taken over at the half by Tiny Budlong. She made a break and that ruined her chances. On the back stretch the second time around Mae Josedale made her move followed by the whole field, but as they flashed by the seven-eighths mark it was Donald G. R. that showed in front and he stayed there, outstripping Rhodola D., Richard Budlong, Mae Josedale and others in 2.12 1/5.

Driver Claude O'Brien took him out in front in the final test and made every post a winning one. The field all held their places until the three-quarter pole had been passed and from there home it was a bitter fast-moving struggle, with the winner hanging onto his lead, Rhodola D., Richard Budlong, Mae Josedale, Abner Britton and Tiny Budlong being packed as thick as sardines a stride or two behind the smooth pacing race winner. Time, 2:14 1/5. He was owned at that time by Captain Sampson Grady of Summerside, who was certainly a proud owner at the conclusion of the race. Mr. Fleming placed Donald G. R. in the hands of Roy Barnett last year, and he brought him along carefully and won 16 heats with him. In one of them he met seven other top pacers at Foxboro, Mass., finishing nicely in front in the excellent time of 2:08 2/5. We hope that Mr. Fleming will have equally good success with his new purchase.

There have been many men connected with the runners and harness horses who would bet large sums on what they thought to be a winner, but the daddy of them all was John W. Gates, whose wife's sister was the mother of E. J. Baker, owner of Greyhound 1.55 1/4, world's champion trotter, and dozens of other top speedsters. Gates was a real money maker and had much to do with the construction of the Northern Pacific Railway, was the first man to sense the possibilities for the sale of barbed wire and made a fortune out of its manufacture. He tried his hand in many ventures, most of which were a success. He was generous to a fault.

Gates was in England in 1901 when the Ascot Gold Cup was run. Overhearing a jockey mention Santoy, Gates went to the races and shocked English bookies by dumping wagers in piles on the horse. Santoy won and Gates was richer by many thousands of pounds. Sitting in a hotel room on a rainy day Gates amused himself by betting $1,000 at a clip on which rain drop would slither to the bottom of the window first. Various reasons are given for his cognomen "Betcha Million," but most people ascribed it to his trip to England where he is supposed to have astounded the bookies by offering to bet that sum on a horse. He was a plunger to the end and staked his life against the physician's diagnosis, who told him that he had to quit smoking and limited them he had spent several cigars mad, nearly as large as baseball bats, but for once he outfoxed himself—the Doctor was right. Gates died in 1911 at the age of fifty-six.

IN THIS CORNER

Baseball, probably the most complex of all summer sports and abounding in freak plays that require quick, accurate decisions by officials to keep a contest running smoothly and at the same time deal fairly with the principals involved, never fails to bring up its problems every year despite the many rules governing its play and procedure. Although the local season hasn't actually started rolling in high gear, it only takes two teams facing one another to bring about problems and disputes, and already they are coming to light in this sector.

In a City Bantam League game last Sunday between the Cardinals and the Yankees the boys ran into a little dispute on the decision of a play in the ninth innings that scored the winning run for the Cardinals. One or two of the boys came into this office the other day to enquire whether the decision given by the third base judge was correct. This was the problem: There was a man on third with two out. The batter hit a fair ground ball to the first baseman who erred on the play allowing the runner safe at first, but in the meantime the runner at third took off for home plate. The first baseman, however, recovered in time for a throw to home plate that caught the runner in a run-down play between home and third. In trying to get back to third, the runner ran into the third baseman who had moved along the baseline on the play, the body contact being sufficient enough to allow the catcher to tag the runner with the ball for the out.

The third base judge called the play "interference on the part of the third baseman" and allowed the runner safe at third. There was considerable argument over the decision, but the decision stood and the next batter decided to bring the runner home and gave the Cardinals the winning run. At the time the situation was explained, it was our view that the correct decision was given, but checked further to be sure. Looking up a parallel case in "Knotty Problems of Baseball" by Billy Evans, general manager of the Detroit Baseball Club and an American League umpire for years, we come up with the following problem and answer that pretty well explains the situation which was enacted here, proving the decision of the local base judge to be correct.

The problem comes under the rule "impeding runner without having ball in obstruction," and here is his problem and the proper ruling: "With two down in the first inning, the third man up for the visiting club hit a line drive between the left and centre field that rolled to the fence. When the ball started on its way it looked good for a triple or home run. Reaching third in safety, the runner was waved on to the plate by the catcher. The plate seemed certain to retire the runner. He decided to try to get back to third in safety. A run-down ensued and at one stage it seemed as if the runner would score. However, the catcher without having the ball in his possession, went through the motions of touching the runner, so hindering his progress that he was eventually retired at the plate. How should the umpire rule?"

"In this play the batter-runner should have been allowed to score on 'obstruction'—on the part of the catcher. The rule governing the play states: In a run-down, if the runner's progress is impeded by any defensive player who does not have the ball in his possession the umpire shall call 'obstruction' and the runner shall be entitled to occupy the base he is attempting to reach when the 'obstruction' occurred. In this case it was home plate."

There was a slight difference in the play that took place here last Sunday. The situation was practically the same, with the

Chicago's Baseball Teams In Spotlight Yesterday

By The Canadian Press
Chicago's two teams took the spotlight Friday in major league baseball competition. The amazing Chicago White Sox handed New York Yankees their first defeat of the season in Yankee Stadium, 7-4, to move within two games of the Bombers, who lead the American League.

Chicago Cubs, whose bats have been swinging with devastating effect this week, went on another rampage, blasting Philadelphia Phils 18-9 in a National League game. The Cubs pounded out three home runs and seven doubles. Boston Red Sox edged Cleveland Indians 2-1 in the only other daylight game in the majors. Pinch-hitter Vernon Stephens' bases-loaded single decided the issue in the eighth inning of this American League encounter. Gritty pitching by Bill Pierce and a grand-slam homer by Ed Stewart figured in the White Sox' victory over the world champions. It was the Yankees' first defeat in their home ground since last Sept. 26.

Pierce and the Yanks' Frank Shea were locked in a 3-4 duel going into the eighth when Stewart, a former Yank, homered into the rightfield stands with none out and the sacks filled. Stewart entered the game in the second inning after rookie Jim Busby stumbled and fell on his arm while chasing a single.

Pierce allowed 11 hits including a triple and two singles by rookie Mickey Mantle. Ranson Jackson continued his torrid hitting for the Cubs with a home run and two singles. In his last three games Jackson has driven in 11 runs, scored nine, hit four homers and collected eight hits in 14 trips to the plate. Hank Sauer and Jack Cusick also homered for the Cubs and Willie Jones and Andy Semnick for Philadelphia. Cusack's homer came with the bases loaded in the fourth inning. The Cubs scored all but one of their runs in the first four innings. Dutch Leonard, third Chicago pitcher, was the winner and rookie Leo Cristante the loser.

Mickey McDermott, making his first start of the season, went all the way for the Red Sox and permitted only six Cleveland hits. Mike Garcia opened for the Indians and entered the eighth with a 1-0 lead. McDermott singled to start the fatal rally. Dom DiMaggio bunted and was safe when Bob Avila rapped Garcia's throw. Johnny Pesky waded to fill the bases. Lefty Lou Brissle took over at the bat and Red Sox manager Steve O'Neill sent righthanded hitting Stephens up to swing for Tom Wright. Stephens, despite an aching back, socked Brissle's first pitch into left field to score McDermott and DiMaggio and break up the game.

However, it is an encouraging sign to see residents getting poaching conscious in respect to their district as it indicates a trend toward the betterment of wildlife conditions and a tendency to uphold the reputation of a specific district in respect to game law observance. I feel that the writer made his statement in good faith.

For approximately 24 years prior to December 1st, 1950, it was my business, as a game officer, to keep tabs on poachers, and potential poachers, in every district in the Province. A favorite stunt of mine was to fill the back of the car with blankets, grub and cooking utensils and go off on a tour that sometimes lasted three days. I camped wherever night overtook me and travelled incognito. I generally wore sneakers, dungarees, or overalls topped with an old red sweat shirt or time honoured windbreaker.

I found out early in the game that if one wanted to gather information it wasn't the smart thing to flash a badge as big as a tin dinner plate and announce: "I'm the game warden"—that is, unless I wanted to talk to myself. I never forgot what a cousin of mine, who lives in the States, told me. He always had a yen to have a peek at his Family Tree and one morning went to an office where they made it a business to look up Family Trees for a stipulated fee. He said they were very nice to him when he first called and told him to come back at two o'clock in the afternoon and they'd have it looked up. To quote his own words: "When I went back in the afternoon no one would speak to me."

I may say that during my twenty-odd years as game officer my records show that I secured convictions for game law violations in most every district in the Province—Emore NOT excepted. Often on patrol an incident will occur that later leads to an offender being brought into Court although the circumstances are against positive action at the time.

A few years ago in the month of February, as a cold winter night was beginning to envelope the countryside in shadows, I was driving through Emore with a horse and sleigh. Why was I in this district so far from home in the dead of winter as snow sifted into the sleigh tracks and the runners sang a frosty tune? Not to fill my lungs with the pure air that one writer boasts about, for a certainty.

The road wound through swamp and woodland and as I sat huddled in my heavy buffalo coat with the robe tucked around my knees, in an effort to ward off

Memorial Playground For Upper Queen Street

A new children's playground, to be dedicated as a memorial to Barry Riggs, seven-year-old boy who was killed in a street accident near his home last week on Upper Queen Street, is being erected by his father Earl "Diver" Riggs in the hope that it will prevent other parents from suffering the same sad bereavement through accident.

Mr. Riggs is devoting a quarter-acre or more of land near his home at Upper Queen Street for the playground site which will be known as "Barry's Playground" and with the assistance of interested and sympathetic neighbors is doing all the work of developing it into a haven for small children where they can play on swings, tilts, sandboxes, etc., out of harm's way.

Three swings and a 12 x 12 foot sand box have already been erected. The latter, containing over three tons of shore sand, will be reserved for the use and pleasure of the little tots.

On a visit to the site yesterday afternoon, at least 20 youngsters could be seen already taking advantage of the fine facilities for play, while others were busily engaged in assisting Mr. Riggs in erecting other amusement features. Discussing the project with "Diver" yesterday he said "It is something I have wanted to do for a long while but never thought I could really do it. Little Barry's accident has made me realize how much a place like this is needed for the kids here, and I have just got up my mind that I am going to do it and see it through. The people all around here," he said "have been wonderful in helping me out, and I feel so much better knowing that it will be doing something to help other little kids like my son Barry."

Included in his plans for the playground will be a merry-go-round, which is under construction now. Mr. Riggs is fashioning the merry-go-round from a hay mow-er wheel which will turn on a car axle imbedded in cement. To the wheel will be bolted planks which will support eight seats, and will be operated manually by an adult or one of the older children.

Mr. Riggs stated that the children from Spring Park School have offered to devote their holiday today (Saturday) to rake and clear the grounds and help in the installation of other playthings and that he hopes to have the project completed for the official opening and dedication on the 24th of May. "We will have a picnic for the kids exception that the runner in this case at the time the "obstruction" took place was trying to reach third base. Therefore, according to the rule, the base judge was perfectly right in allowing the runner to regain third base in safety, and the play resumed from there. In the local incident, "obstruction" was on the part of the third baseman, but the same ruling applies.

HUNTERS' CORNER

About two weeks ago I received a letter from a resident of North Emore wherein he took exception to a paragraph in the Hunters' Corner dated April 28th, 1951, quoted:—"I do not wish to convey the impression that all residents of West-Prince are poachers. On the contrary I know residents of that area who would gladly feed and care for such a trusting wild creature (referring to the little doe deer). On the other hand this district harbours a considerable element who believe that all wildlife are fair game at any season of the year..." unquote.

My correspondent wrote in part, quote:—"We are not 'poachers' in Emore and that the only unlawful shooting is done by hunters from farther East," unquote. I am in complete agreement with what the writer has to say in regard to hunters from points farther east who visit his district and violate game laws. I have had occasion in the past to investigate such carryings on in the Baptiste Point area but I am afraid that I shall have to take his contention that no residents of his district commit game law infractions, with a pinch of salt.

However, it is an encouraging sign to see residents getting poaching conscious in respect to their district as it indicates a trend toward the betterment of wildlife conditions and a tendency to uphold the reputation of a specific district in respect to game law observance. I feel that the writer made his statement in good faith.

Kid Gavilan Outclasses Johnny Bratton To Win Welterweight Crown

By Jack Hand
NEW YORK, May 18 (AP)—Busy Kid Gavilan gave outclassed back-pedaling Johnny Bratton a thorough pasting tonight to win the world welterweight title for Cuba on a unanimous 15-round decision at Madison Square Garden. Gavilan weighed 145 1-4, Bratton 147.

From the moment when he zinged home 36 consecutive punches in the first round, Gavilan took charge of this uneven battle, stayed to find a successor for Sugar Ray Robinson. Both judges Joe Agnello and Artie Schwartz had the sleek Cuban hawk on top 11-4. Referee Ruby Goldstein saw it a little closer, 8-5 with two even. The AP card saw it 11-3-1.

A group of Cubans, including Ambassador Luis Machado, stormed into the ring bearing their native flag to greet their first champion since Kid Chocolate.

There are a few items to clear up, including a July date with challenger Billy Graham of New York and claims of Britain's Eddie Thomas before Gavilan will gain universal recognition. Meantime he is talking about an over-the-weight match with Rocky Graziano.

But this bout carried New York State blessing and the National Boxing Association already had crowned Bratton for his March 14 split decision victory over Charlie Fusari.

The crowd of 11,747 that paid $55,531 boomed Bratton's persistent backpedalling.
