

Stresses Fundamental Tasks In Municipal Administration

Four fundamental tasks are confronting Canada's urban population today, said Mayor J. D. Stewart, Charlottetown, president of the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities, in addressing the annual meeting of the organization at Hamilton, Ontario, yesterday. These tasks, His Worship said, were concerned with education, housing, finance and traffic.

"We in civic politics must be interested in what the future holds, not only for the city which it is our privilege to represent, but in the overall picture as to how the cities in our great Dominion are preparing for the future," Mayor Stewart said.

"The problems which confront us are similar; they are national in scope; they differ only in size."

The part our Federation plays in its function as an intricate part of this Dominion is much greater than we realize. We are the form of government closer to the citizens of this country than either Provincial or Federal. It is admitted that our organization, through municipal co-operation, can do more for national unity than any other agency in this land of ours.

His Worship stressed the need of vision in public affairs, and of preparing for the future. "Within the next quarter century, changes will be of such magnitude in the economic structure of this country that all other phases of our national life must be studied and planned, starting now so that we Canadians can still keep Canada democratic, by which I mean that the supreme power of government will remain in the hands of the people, either directly or in the hands of their chosen representatives."

As a first step he stressed the education of our youth, for from them must come the citizens of tomorrow. He referred in this connection to the section of the federation brief, on education, prepared by Dr. LeZerte for presentation to the Royal Commission on Canada's Economic Prospects. He urged that every municipality start now to implement these recommendations, so that the facilities of schools and universities will be available and adequate to look after our ever increasing population. This, along with competent teachers, should provide the means for those with ability to equip themselves for the opportunities that will come in the future.

Careful planning to cope with traffic problems was also essential. These problems are practically the same in every municipality—they differ only in size. Indorsing the Canadian Transit Association's brief to the Gordon Commission, the Federation has declared that "modern large cities from Mayor Stewart's address: "To bring about necessary changes, to put into effect plans for the future, to implement the findings of the Gordon Commission as it applies to our respective towns and cities, requires the wherewithal to do it. We all have set up Town Planning Boards, and we could term them as architects or engineers for future development of our cities. But architects and engineers are neither the builders nor the financiers—they are the planners. It is up to us to see that they are basing their planning for physical growth (and I mean industrial sites, residential areas, commercial areas, schools, churches, etc.), with ideas to parallel our economic growth. To do this, there must be co-ordinated staff work between finance and planning officers. Only then can we be assured of ultimate success. This is the responsibility of every town's administrative system, and that means 'Town Hall' and Council policy."

"If the planning for our physical growth is conjunctive with our economic growth, it will aid creditworthily borrowing. Planned borrowing will solve many of our municipal problems. However, it will not eliminate the need for specific forms of financial aid from the senior government. We must make sure that our own municipal financial structure is in order and economically sound. Then, and only then, can we make our demands for financial assistance to these senior bodies."

NEW TAX AGREEMENT

"We are all agreed that the presence of Municipal representatives at the October Federal-Provincial Conference marked a significant step forward in our long effort to have the senior Governments of Canada recognize the financial difficulties under which municipal governments are operating. But, it is only one step. Our energy must go further. We must use all our influence and all our energy in bringing about, first, a new tax agreement, and secondly, a new allocation of responsibilities."

"It was recognized and acknowledged by every Provincial Premier attending the Agenda Planning Conference held in advance of the October Federal-Provincial Conference of last year. Some Provincial Governments have already introduced policies which provide supplementary revenue to Municipal Governments on one basis or another. Other Provincial Governments have indicated their commitments and their desire to stabilize and strengthen the revenue sources of Municipal Governments. But all of them say there is a limit to how far they can go, and without exception, they place that limit within the framework of a more acceptable and more adequate distribution of the combined taxing responsibilities of the Federal and Provincial governments. "In as much, therefore, as the Municipal Governments have as much at stake in any redistribution of Federal-Provincial revenues as have the Federal and Provincial Governments, it is logical and just that the Municipal point of view should find expression by municipal representatives within the Councils of Provincial Delegations attending Federal-Provincial Conferences where these matters are under discussion."

"As yet, nothing has come as a result of the October discussions, which would in any way indicate that a solution of the Municipal tax and finance structure is on the way to being resolved. Nor is there any hope that, within the framework of the new proposed Federal-Provincial tax and Fiscal Agreements, it will be resolved."

"Our Conference here in Hamilton, therefore, sees us in no way further advanced than we were when we discussed the financial problems of municipal governments a year ago. What our next steps are to be is for this Conference to decide. In my view, we should state frankly and boldly our case for a new agreement and press forward in every form until we have achieved it. Then and only then can the municipal governments of Canada hope to cope with the mounting demands for more adequate services and improvements which the growth and development of our cities and towns require."

New York Central Selling Stations

NEW YORK (AP)—The New York Central Railroad Monday put up for sale hundreds of passenger stations strung along its 10,700-mile system.

President Alfred E. Perlman said the Central will lease back whatever station space it needs for operations. He added that sale of the station properties, which range from big terminals to the smallest branch line way station, will have no effect on the quality of rail service.

The central said the decision to sell was made in an effort to reduce its passenger deficit, which it figured at $37,788,353 for last year.

Guelph Has Floral Clock And Calendar

QUELPH, Ont. (CP)—One of the major tourist attractions in this western Ontario city is a floral clock which not only tells the time, but also shows the day, month and year.

The timepiece, a creation of Parks Superintendent Jack Clark, is almost entirely mechanical. Only the date must be changed by hand and Mr. Clark is out every morning to make the necessary alterations.

The hands of the clock are aluminum troughs holding plants and flowers. The troughs are attached by rods to a small electric motor in a chamber under the clock. The pointed ends of the hands are painted white, in contrast to the green of the arms and the yellow of the numerals.

A total of 6,000 blooms of various kinds have been used. The hub of the clock is in coil and the numerals are set in variegated plants of the same species.

Around the clock itself are circles of silver, leaf geraniums, red irenes, blue lobelia and white alysium.

Mr. Clark has even used plants to warn over-curious tourists off the timepiece.

In a small plot at the base of the clock the words "keep off" have been lettered in green telfantheria, backed by white shells.

Raft Nearing End Of Voyage; Food, Water Short 30 Days

PENZANCE, England (CP)—A bearded Frenchman told Monday night how he and two friends drank rainwater for 30 days and tried desperately to spear fish after their supplies ran out during a cross-Atlantic trip on a raft made of planks and rope.

Twenty-nine-year-old Hen' Beaudout was brought ashore by a lifeboat from the raft l'Egare II Monday after 57 days of drifting through violent Atlantic storms after leaving Canada.

Beaudout came ashore to arrange for towing of the raft into Falmouth, on England's south coast. Two lifeboats took it in tow shortly before midnight.

His two companions, Gaston Vanacker, 31, and Marc Modena, a 27-year-old artist, remained aboard the raft some 12 miles off Lizard Point at the westernmost tip of England.

L'Egare (the lost one) set out May 24 from Halifax with four men aboard. One of them, Jose Martinez, was taken off by a Canadian ship after a month because of constant sickness.

Beaudout told reporters here that the raft buckled viciously

WATER PRECIOUS

Beaudout said the men had not been able to shave for the last 30 days.

"Water was too precious," he said. "It was better to go down the throat than on the face."

The men spent the time playing checkers and standing guard. During recent days, a prevailing wind had prevented any progress, and they did not know their position until a Dutch ship told them they were near England.

All three men are French nationals whose homes are in Montreal.

When the voyage began, the men had enough food and water for more than a month at sea. At one time during the trip, the crew of a ship which had come alongside gave them food.

PROGRESS CHARTED

The progress of the l'Egare was closely charted by planes and ships during the trip across the Atlantic, and its crew, using a sail to push them along, had reported "everything well on board," several times.

The original l'Egare was wrecked on the Newfoundland coast in a first attempt to cross the Atlantic last year.

Military Fliers Get Pay Boost

OTTAWA (CP)—In a move to attract more high-calibre aircrew, the defence department has more than doubled the flying pay for Canada's military fliers.

An air force spokesman Monday estimated the raises will cost between $5,000,000 and $6,000,000 a year.

The new rates, retroactive to July 1, boost the former flat $30 a month to a graduated scale of $75 monthly, and rising to a top of $150 for active-duty aircrew.

Qualified aircrew on staff duties who maintain their flying proficiency have also been given raises but not quite so high as for full-time fliers. They run to about $100 monthly.

The raises apply to fliers in the reserve forces as well as members of the regular forces, but the rates are scaled down slightly. Top for an auxiliary flier is about $125, the spokesman estimated.

HIGHER CALIBRE

Defence Minister Campney announced the increases Monday with the statement that it is expected the raises will make it easier for the RCAF to attract high quality personnel best able to fly complex modern aircraft.

"The increase is in recognition of the professional character and responsibilities involved in air-suitabilities required today," he said.
