LAC AND MRS. JAMES J. MACDONALD

S'side Bride Wears Egyptian Brocade For Trinity Nuptials

Summerside Trinity United Church was the setting for a beautiful spring wedding when Rev. Cecil Webber united in a double ring ceremony Roma Aletha, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Livingstone, to LAC James J. MacDonald, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roderick MacDonald of Lumby, B.C.

To the strains of the Wedding March played by Mrs. Eric Sheen the bride entered the church on the arm of her father who gave her in marriage. She was gowned in a floor length dress of imported Egyptian silver brocade styled with scooped neckline the waist coming to a point in back with tiny covered buttons, long sleeves coming to a point over the wrist and a very full skirt with slight train. Her headdress was a tiny pill box hat trimmed with pearls and held a three tier bouffant veil. Her bouquet was a full cascade of orange delight roses.

The matron of honour was sister of the bride Donna Doucette. She wore a street length dress of orange in brocade made similar to that of the bride with tiny pill box hat shoes and mitts in matching shades. She carried a colonial bouquet of poms in blending tones.

Bridesmaids were two sisters Janet and Kay who wore street length dresses of mint green brocade made on the same lines with tiny pill box hats, shoes and mitts in matching shades. They carried ballerina bouquets of poms in matching shades.

The winsome flower girl was Sharon Doucette, niece of the bride. She was dressed in orange ice brocade and carried a basket of poms wearing a headdress of similar flowers.

Guest Soloist was William Wedlock, cousin of the bride who sang the Wedding Prayer before the ceremony and "I'll Walk Beside You" during the signing of the register.

The best man was LAC Jim Garsite friend of the groom. Ushers were LAC Frank Kato and Wayne Mitchell.

Mrs. Livingstone chose for her daughter's wedding a navy lace dress with bolero, and navy and white hat with accessories to match. Her corsage was white frenched carnations.

A reception for approximately 50 guests was held at Epworth Hall. The bride's table was centered with a three tier cake topped with a bouquet of orange delight roses as carried by the bride in her cascade bouquet. Lighted candles stood on either sides of the wedding cake which was cut in the traditional manner by the bride and groom.

The toast to the bride was proposed by Rev. Cecil Webber and responded to by the groom.

The guest book was circulated by Miss Ernestine England, friend of the bride.

For travelling the bride chose a green suit with beige and white accessories and pinned on a corsage of white carnations.

Before her marriage the bride was on the staff of the Island Telephone Company. The couple will reside in Vancouver where the groom is stationed with the RCAF a bachelor party and presentation was held for the bridegroom at the home of Jim Gaunsite. A shower was held at the home of the bride's parents where she received a number of gifts.

Toasted Coconut Bread Is Really A Tasty Treat

COCONUT has played a great role in food history. Its fibrous husk is useful for making yarn, matting, brushes and even bedding. The hard shell burns like charcoal and makes fine fuel. The coconut meat is eaten fresh, or dried and pressed to release the rich oils.

Fresh coconuts came to Europe in the 16th Century. How could their meat be kept fresh without transporting the bulk and weight of the shells?

DRIED COCONUT

The answer to this problem was announced by a London merchant, Henry Vavasseur. It was desiccated (partly dried) coconut, made and shipped from one of his factories in Ceylon. As recently as the 1920's over 80 percent of all the coconut entering the U.S.A. came from Ceylon.

All this I learned at a charming reception in celebration of this distinguished firm's first century in international trade. Guests of honor were Mr. R. G. H. Buxton, Chairman of the Board and Managing Director of their far - flung companies, and Mrs. Buxton, en route back to their home in England after a round-the-world tour.

CELEBRATION CAKE

The celebration cake was exceptional — a white cake, made with butter, containing chopped pecans and flavored with rum extract. It was covered with royal icing drifted with shredded coconut.

All of which reminded me of the popularity of coconut in England, especially the delightful coconut sweet bread I enjoyed with butter and hot tea while visiting there. Not as rich or sweet as regulation cake, the coconut itself was the star.

ELLEN'S DIARY

The Scent Of Rain-Washed Soil Trails Storm's Might

"Did you hear that, Ellen?" James queried rising quickly from the old bed this morning, his tones somewhat awed. "Dear me, what a crash that was! Let's get downstairs" he said, making haste to dress... And we came from a dream that had been wholly pleasant, set as it was in a charming land of flower-bloom. A leisurely country, where every last obligation could await one's pleasure if she chose to idle away any sunny or moonlighted hours. A lovely place? Yes, but, on sober reflection, it was only a bit more beautiful than is this Island of ours when the delight of warm summery days are upon it.

But now lightning split the heavens, and right on its heels. "Too closely for comfort" James said, thunder crashed above the valley. And rain sheeted from the roof, veiling from us the distant and nearer scene, even that of the mill below, and the house across on the hill.

"I like to be up and dressed when there's an electrical storm" James remarked making now for the near stairway. "Then if anything should happen, one would be better prepared to cope with it. I wonder how..." And we knew that his speculations were all-inclusive. He was hoping that no one, anywhere Island- over, would suffer any inconvenience, or loss of hard-won effects, during this storm which in a dreadful show of might was apparently lessening when we came to the kitchen. The twilight of its strength was dissolving in the light of the clearing then.

"I'd say it's about over now" James said coming to a verandah to observe sky and valley. "But I wouldn't light the fire — not for a few minutes at any rate, until we see that it is past."

It was usual down the years at Alderlea, for the sittingroom in the main house to collect and keep the family safely through such a storm. Thither its members would repair, drawn by a common consent, to sit in a respected quiet. Hands were idle —all work suspended. Sometimes, the more timid chatted trying thus to forget its intensity, while others watched through the windows the play of lighting above the hills. We, not to be actually afraid of the storm, but to marvel over its intensity— majesty and might, and to wonder over the underlying pattern of things. Because there is a design — the world is not like our garden, a haphazard ensemble, but all fashioned, even down to the last wild cherry tree tucked these days in pretty contrast against a sea of evergreen on the slopes, to make glad the heart.

And the scent of the rain - washed earth with its blades and leaves and red soil, came in to us at breakfast, and its cleanness lay on the fields.

"Seems as though there won't be much fieldwork today" James offered. "If the sun would come now" Mack, a visitor, smiled, "we'd see the grain grow!"

Misty, showery it was— a pearly grey day, without sun or billowing fleecy clouds against the blue. And there is no moon now, nor star to bid us a bright "Good-morrow."

Until tomorrow — Diary — Good-night.....
