

A dash of drama in latest leathers

The clothes line this season has a softness to it, silhouette and drape in the latest leather fashions. Women will find the garments so well-mixed with a dash of drama. For every style need — daytime, evening, sports, at home — exciting garments appear in smooth, suede and impregnated leathers.

Leather colors cover every base. There are subtle neutral tones that blend with most costumes, clear blues and reds for a visual pick-me-up, earthy sprightly shades for dramatic effect.

Leather coats have been slimmed to new elegance. Trim, bodyskinning lines are interpreted in luxurious, lightweight leathers. Silhouettes are straight, princess, A-line, plus a return to the classic wrapped coat. Important fashion touches are side closings, and the stitched or quilted look in suede coats.

The leather jacket, once a tailored garment for casual wear, can now be seen at all hours for formal and informal occasions. It may be cut in the classic mode as an indispensable companion to separate skirts and pants. It may be lined in fur for sportswear — as spectator or participant.

Interestingly, the leather suit, coordinated jacket and skirt has captured the imagination and whole-hearted approval of fashion-wise women. Softly feminine theatre suits, casual suits with dashing pullover jackets, rustic suits for dreary daytime wear are available in smooth and silky suede leathers, as well as interesting impregnated leathers and rugged fun-to-wear pigskin.

Lean, loose or lightly skimming the body, the leather dress cuts a colorful swath through the fall season. In deep rich shades and pale neutrals, printed leather dresses stand smartly alone or team with their own jackets.

This season's diverting collection of leather separates — skirts, pants, ski jackets and blouses — is proof that leather is truly fashion's plaything.

Career girl to suburban housewife, when it comes to the new leather separates, everyone can play the game of mix or match.

Soft look seen in autumn belts

The soft look brings a new interest in belts—in smooth and patent leather, in steerhide and suede leather, in crushed and calf. There is also focus on reptile, and on jeweled varieties, day or all will be worn to emphasize a pretty waistline.

With run from spaghetti-thin strands to slouchy tummy-merchants, in every texture and width.

For added sparkle the smart woman may add costume jewelry to her belt, such as charms in the form of the Caravelle pendant by Bulova. You may choose from lucky-13 group of spheres and discs on golden chains. Lacquered cases come in 3 different shades on which golden tracings have been diamond-cut.

Of course these timely charms really keep time: they have unbreakable main-springs and are shock-proof.

Furs are varied for fall season

The fall furs have arrived in town and country — furs from tip to toe; furs from tiny ascots to floor-length evening wraps; whimsical furs for active sports on the inside; hardy furs for country living; elegant fur suits—layered, reversible furs.

Fur pullovers, fur dresses — you name it. Virtually any fashion is now available in supple furs, tailored as meticulously as cloth.

Fur news finds fashion flipping for the spotted set, with leopard, jaguar, and tiger shining bright. Going sportive in ski parkas are fitch, snow leopard, snowy lynx. Pony shows up in little waistcoats.

Furs are capes and tunics and trench coats in sable, chinchilla or ermine. Furs are suits, or dramatically fine suit jackets.

Along with a flood of color, a fur comes a flow of dark furs — natural ranch mink, black, dyed minks worked horizontally, velvety-deep Alaska fur seal in free-flowing silhouettes or slim coats with ease.

And with all the talk about stretch in fabrics, furs are not to be outdone. A newly patented stretch process on Foulke-processed Lakoda, Alaska fur seal, makes this tawny fur ideal for active wear.

THIEF DESIRED FOODSTUFF
DENVER (AP) — The cooks were startled but nobody did anything as a thief carrying a big cardboard box walked into the Hilton Hotel kitchen Sunday.
After loading up two nine-pound hams, 14 club steaks and 17 New York cut steaks, he left.

Fall sportswear styles mixable

Here comes the sportswear for fall. Here come the mixable separates, the skirts and jumpers, the blouses and sweaters, the jackets and weskies, the pants, the pants suits, the jump suits. Here come the casual dresses and the knits of every variety. Here come the work coats, ready for walking or driving.

Here come stretch fabrics. Here come leather and the look like leathers. Here come the furry piles. And here comes fur looking more dashingly sporty than ever.

Here come the Tom Jones look and the feminine look here come the schoolboy look and the sporty look. Here come the traditional classics and the lively new entries.

arrive with everything to make a woman's wardrobe both wonderful and wonderfully versatile. In separates, the key word is mixable. All the component parts get together with carefree ease, blending fabrics and colors. The certain sign of fall '64 appears in neckline interest for tops — whether it's a cowl collar, a "Tom Jones" bow, a ruffly frill or a cascading jabot. For instance, this fall's version of the "old school tie" is youthful, flowing, usually threaded around a midly collar.

This season's fashion news is reflected, too, in "action" skirts and jumpers. Skirts take on the lively look with pleats — single pleats, set at the side, front or back; pleats from a "tummy band"; all-around pleats. Jumpers and skirts swing out with low-placed pleats, are eased with side or back wraps. Even the most classic, basic sportswear fashions show hints of this new fall approach to ease.
