Strange But True

By F. H. MacArthur

The inhabitants of the wilds of Peru are a strange people with many curious customs. Take, for instance, the Pango Indians whose men folk weave all the blankets while their homes, consisting of four poles with inclined roof of palm leaves, are built by women. Pigs' ribs are favorite ornaments with the fair sex and a great number of these dangling about her person is proof of her high social standing.

The Campa Indians can shoot a hole right through a man at a distance of 80 yards with bow and arrow weapons. The shafts is made of light cane pointed with hardwood cut from the Charta Palm. No poison is used.

One would think it difficult to find a wood lighter than cork, yet the balsa tree is three times lighter than cork, hence it is very buoyant, and half a dozen small logs bound together will support a load of 600 lbs.

A century ago, Ireland was treated like a conquered country. Hangings and shootings of rebels a daily occurrence. Criminals were hanged, five or six together, at Tyburn. Gibbets could be seen at all the cross-roads throughout the unhappy land.

A hundred years ago, drunkenness was looked upon as a manly vice. Also man-fighting and dog-fighting. "Six-hole men" were common among the pioneer settlers in this Island. Think of it! The pillory, public whippings, and public hangings drew large crowds. The public mind of this day revolts at such brutality, yet all these atrocious happenings took place in the days of our forefathers. We have in a century undergone most of our savage tendencies. We are more enlightened nowadays. We respect ourselves more, and as Islanders are more respected. We now look back with shame on the manners of a hundred years ago, and yet we often hear the remark that we are not as good as past generations were.

It is strange but true fact that men of genius are notorious for running into debt. At Pitt's death, England voted 40,000 pounds to satisfy the demands of his creditors. Shadair spent his first year's fortune in a six weeks' spree. Munroe and Jefferson never got out of the "red." The greatest debtor connected with science was John Hunter, yet he left an enduring monument to his fame. Jan Steen, the artist, was always in financial difficulties because he drank too much. He drank and painted alternately. He died in debt, but his paintings steadily rose in value until today they are worth their weight in gold.

The great Ben Johnson was never free of poverty, though he managed to have a pretty good time while he lived. Greene Peelle, and Marlowe lived lives of dissipation, and ended their days in terrible poverty. The latter was killed in a drunken brawl and the former died of disease brought on by his excesses.

Lovelace died in a cellar. Butler, the author of Hudibras, died of starvation in Rose Alley. It is said of Goldsmith that he swam in debt. Even at the time he had sold his "Vicar of Wakefield," his cheques were dishonored at the bank, and when he passed away his one suit belonged to the tailor who had made it. Byron would have spent many a day in prison for debt but for his social court.

De Poe's life was one long struggle with poverty. And the great Walter Scott exhausted his best years trying to pay off a debt of 100,000 pounds due to the failure of Constable and Company. With which he had become deeply involved. The world helped most of these men generously, but the sad part of it is that they did not help themselves.

tained information on the duties of a good citizen, and at various times read literature on the subject.

Press—Mrs. Charles MacNeil, convener, during the year six monthly meetings were reported to the press.

Social Service—Mrs. Lawrence Doucette, convener, reported having received donations of nine quilts, and clothing which were remade into garments for needy families. Sixteen pairs of mittens and fourteen pairs of socks were also knitted. At Christmas time, eight baskets were packed and distributed to families in the parish. Sick people were visited and were given treats of fruit, etc.

The conveners expressed their thanks for the help given to them by their committees. The President, Mrs. M. J. Doyle, in her report thanked the Director, Rev. Father Robin, for his help, inspiration and encouragement throughout the year. She also thanked the members for their spirit of co-operation and their willingness to do their best, and stressed the necessity of a greater attendance at the meetings, also increased discussion by the members.

The following slate of officers were elected by ballot for the ensuing year: President, Mrs. M. J. Doyle; secretary, Mrs. Thomas Johnston; treasurer, Mrs. Joseph L. Gallant; councillors: Mrs. Bertram Blaquiere, Mrs. Lawrence Doucette, Mrs. Joseph Gaudin, Mrs. George LeClair, Mrs. Emile Gauthier. The officers were installed following the completion of election.

The Director, Rev. Father Robin thanked all and congratulated the officers on their leadership during the year. He expressed much satisfaction for work done, and encouraged members to strive for even greater action during the coming year. He explained why the C. W. L. must work shoulder to shoulder and unless they do, something will be lacking in the work the church is doing on earth. He asked fullest co-operation and continued good work for the coming year.

At the conclusion of the meeting a social hour was held and a delicious lunch served, the officers acting as hostesses.

Scores with Home Baking at Queen's County Fair

Yes, the prize tag on the loaf says "First!" And that's only one of the honors Mrs. Louis V. Goldie won with her baking at the 1950 Queen's County Fair at Gagetown, N.B. She can well be proud, for Queen's County boasts some mighty keen home bakers, and Fair competition is pitched high. Speaking of her success in baking, Mrs. Goldie says that the first step is to choose the right ingredients. "Your yeast must have plenty of pep—and that's why I recommend Fleischmann's Yeast. With Fleischmann's Yeast, my doughs are light and my finished baking is tender and digestible." Right across the plate! It's results that make Fleischmann's Yeast the choice of prize-winning cooks, and the favorite of 3 out of 4 Canadian women.

Dorothy Dix Says

DEAR DOROTHY DIX: I have been married five years and worked until a year ago. As long as I worked I had some spending money, but now I have none. My husband refuses to give me even a penny for myself. He says he can't understand why I need money, as he pays all the bills and I have a charge account at the grocery. When the insurance man and the paper boy come I have to tell them to come back when my husband is home, as I haven't a cent. I wouldn't dare start a charge account for clothes, yet he doesn't give me any money to buy them with. If he didn't have the money, I would not say anything, but he has plenty and gets what he wants. When I was working I always helped pay the household bills. I have thought of going back to work, but I have a small boy and don't like to leave him. What shall I do?

WORRIED

ANSWER: I don't suppose that talking to a tightwad, like your husband and explaining to him how unjust he is and how his niggardliness is killing your love for him would do the slightest bit of good. Such a man always loves his pocketbook more than he does anything else on earth.

But, on the other hand, you cannot stand the life of slavery that he is imposing upon you, so you will have to buck up and take a stand—and tell him that he has to, at least, pay you a servant's wages for doing his cooking and washing and ironing, or else you are going back to your old job, or into somebody else's kitchen, where you will get a pay envelope on Saturday night.

DOROTHY DIX cannot reply personally to readers, but will answer problems of general interest through her column.
