

Children should always increase in weight. Not to grow, not to increase in flesh, belongs to old age.

Present and future health demands that this increase in weight should be steady and never failing.

To delicate children, Scott's Emulsion brings richer blood and firmer flesh. Better color comes to the cheeks and stronger muscles to the limbs. The gain in weight is substantial; it comes to stay.

Of Special Interest to our Farmers

Harvesting the Grain.

Says the Farmer's Advocate: A comparatively light hay harvest in most parts of Eastern Canada, owing to the freezing out of the clover crop last winter, has shortened the season generally required for securing that crop, and given ample time for cultivating and cleaning the corn and root crops. The deficiency in the quantity of fodder for stock from this source renders it all the more important that special attention be given to harvesting the grain crops, which, fortunately, are extensive and abundant at the best time and in the best possible condition to secure a good quality of both straw and grain. If these crops are cut in good time, before the grain is dead ripe, and while there is yet a considerable amount of sap left in the straw, the grain will continue to draw nourishment from this source sufficient to mature itself and to attain its fullness, and will, provided weather conditions are favorable, take on a fresher color than if allowed to fully ripen before being cut, while the straw will be so much more valuable as fodder as to far more than counterbalance any possible shrinkage from the early harvesting, and the loss from shelling, which is considerable in the case of overripe grain, will be much less. Of course, the weather probabilities have to be considered in this connection, as it would be unwise to cut grain crops on the green side and bind it in sheaves if wet weather is likely to prevail, but with a prospect of fair weather, and by binding in small sheaves, it will be found generally advantageous to cut the cereal crops while the grain is in the dough state, and before it has become hardened and fully ripe, but to avoid musty care must be observed that the straw is thoroughly dry before it is put in the mow or stack. The value of pea straw as fodder for sheep, or to be cut up for use as a part of the roughness in feeding cattle or horses is greatly enhanced by cutting before fully ripe, and by the use of the modern improved harvester attachment to the mowing machine it is left in such condition that the process of drying and curing is hastened so that the crop may generally be secured in excellent condition, and made a valuable addition to the supply of winter fodder for stock. The importance of early harvesting in the Northwest is emphasized by the liability to visitations of early frost, and also in central Canada, when the purpose is to follow with fall wheat, in which case a few days may make a very great difference in the preparation of the land for a seed-bed for that crop, as autumn months are often exceedingly dry, and advantage needs to be taken of the opportunity to utilize every shower that falls by surface cultivation to conserve the moisture in the land.

The Farm Team.

The farmer who undertakes to carry on the operations of his farm with a "plug" team is practicing false economy, says Farmer's Voice. The farm team is the most important part of the equipment of the farm, and if it is not equal to every emergency it is not one that can be used with the greatest profit. The farmer who has a poor team wastes a great deal of time if he is humane by giving the team its time and making its work as light as possible. If he is not a humane man he is guilty of cruelty to animals by compelling ing a weak team to do work that should be done by a good one.

The farm team should be a heavy one. If the work in hand is heavy the team is equal to the occasion, and if it is light the team will do a big day's work with ease and will not eat as much feed as would a poor team kept thin by constant overworking.

In feeding a horse it should be remembered that the stomach of the animal is small, and that it is fitted to consume such concentrated feeds as grain in larger quantities proportionate to its weight, than almost any other animal. A good many farmers think to economize by feeding plentifully of hay and saving the grain.

The writer feeds plentifully of oats and gives a little good hay. The team is not given more than a handful of hay at noon, and in the evening about ten pounds of hay is put in the manger for each 1000 pounds the horse weighs. This amount is not strictly regulated, but the amount stated is approximately correct.

Good grooming is strictly insisted on, and the horses are carefully groomed in the evening before they are left for the night. The stables are cleaned and swept morning and evening, and a thick bed of straw is laid for the horses every night.

The harness is made to fit them, and they are taught to expect good treatment. As a result they are always ready for hard work, and light work does not worry them.
