DOROTHY DIX'S COLUMN

Housing Problem

Living With In-Laws Not Always Matter Of Choice

DEAR MISS DIX: While you bewail young married people living under parental roofs, there are many of us who have no choice in the matter. We live with our folks, hoping for the day when we can get our own home at a price at which we can reasonably expect to complete the financial responsibility assumed.

Most of us young people living at home are veterans who did not get established in the prewar era but who came out of service to find the real estate agents and builders in full charge, ready to sell a poorly constructed match box at a fantastic price, or to rent an apartment for $125 per month. I know for a fact that many of these real estate agents were almost paupers in 1935—but how different in 1952.

You may call us mama's boys for sticking at home, but most of us work hard every day and keep getting on for the time when good houses will be built for the working man. More power to those families who are making the best of things and resisting high prices while avoiding being victimized by high-priced but cheaply built housing.

ANSWER: Yours was another of the anonymous letters I so constantly deplore. I would like to send you a personal reply, with perhaps some concrete help.

The particular instance in this column to which you take exception was a clearly stated case of a man who wouldn't set up a home for his wife because he preferred living with his mother. There was no indication that the status was dictated by economic reasons. This is the condition I bewail—and will eternally continue

The Stars Say --

By Genevieve Kemble

For Tomorrow

IT is probable that a rash, singular or erratic idea, a peculiar urge or emotion, possibly a queer notion to experiment, could wreck projects already well on the way to accomplishment. Such whimsy or urge to upset existing tactics, to rush off on another tangent, could have widespread consequences, affecting many relations and objectives, and at the same time meeting with stern opposition from elders or established institutions. This strange whim may be emotional, having some far-reaching or surprising climax.

For the Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may find themselves in a strange web of self-undoing, affecting all existing or progressive projects or ambitions and with peculiar, radical and regrettable reactions. While there may be a quixotic urge to try out novel experiences, test new ideas or practices, this could be an emotional drive, in explicable and undefensible. This may have far-flung reactions and draw down the wrath of staid elders or old institutions. "Look before you leap" is a wise saw.

Day After Tomorrow

The horoscope holds augury of a sudden and entirely unforeseen development in which all manner of activities, plans, hopes and wishes may have a surprising about-face. Such revamping programs might be due to peculiar, eccentric or unconventional incidents. Providing this upset is not begot of sinister or erratic prodding, nor is too shattering in its rearranged tactics, there could be pleasant denouements.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year of unlooked-for change, with contacts, adventures and crises quite outside programs, and perhaps desires and plans previously outlined or inaugurated. This sudden event, inspiration or drive may have a peculiar or revolutionary reaction on all departments of daily life. While there might be something queer or erratic, even "designing" at the source, the final outcome could be thrilling and find life pitched to welcome or spectacular adventure. A child born on this day may find a life of exceptional adventures and experiences, with surprising honors, important position, perhaps public acclaim.

ELLEN'S DIARY

By An Island Farmer's Wife

And now after a day of much activity, the two children of the place are in bed. A lengthy silence, where a short time ago was conversation and sleepy chuckles indicates that sleep, boon to weary bodies and minds, has unfolded them. They bathed, or rather it was a rite mostly ours—washing away the dust of the day's haying, the grime from close contact at times with the good earth.

"It seems as if these toes of mine, just won't come clean!" Gage said, finding thus we suspected, legitimate excuse to linger at the pleasant endeavour. And in his turn, Jamie, "Never saw the like of the sweat and dust left today!" And we washed the two warm, sturdy, sun-browned bodies, saying at heart a prayer . . . remembering that at best, as in verses of Barbara C. Ryberg's we had just been reading, mothers and grandmothers and all who join in the care of children can clean only "the outward and visible;" they must trust hearts to Another.

Because there was intermittent dampness to defer it, this week the haying progressed more slowly . . . in the lee of a woody spot not far from the buildings presently however, a stack mushroomed in the stack-yard. And there, on an exquisite afternoon, at an improvised table in the shadowed place, we spread the supper for children and workers. Spruces at our backs, sunny pictured countryside before. Was ever fare more tasteful? Spiced as it was with scented breeze of haying and for music, a first locust-tune.

But even in the charm and delight of that day a calamity befell the Family. In a freak accident that had to do with driving the horse in the lift, James suffered a fall which left a bruised right shoulder in its wake. "Now if it had been the left," one of the children offered, recalling that he is a southpaw—by inheritance and inclination, "he would be in a bad way indeed!" As it is our sun of day has lost considerable lustre in the mishap and the work continues more solemnly than before . . . In the midst of our busy days July stepped down and aside to make way for August, a month more staid and sober, to enter along a path silvered bewitchingly by a growing moon. Like pleasant dreams to us, pass away this summer's golden days.

And so this evening, shadowed pleasantly by the Sunday to come, we washed the two . . . saying at heart a prayer: "I wash the dirt from little feet. And as I wash I pray, 'Lord, keep them ever pure and true To walk the narrow way.'"

I wash the dirt from little hands. And earnestly I ask: 'Lord may they ever yielded be To do the humblest task.'

I wash the dirt from little knees, and pray, 'Lord may they be The place where victories are won. And orders sought from Thee.'

How Can I!!!

By Anne Ashley

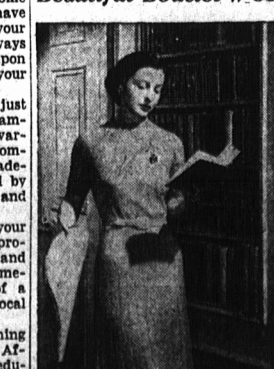

Q. How can I set the color of a delicate fabric that has been found to be excellent for setting the color of a delicate fabric. Just add a teaspoonful to each gallon of water and your garments, even those made of serge and other woollen materials will wash easily without losing their color.

Q. How can I lengthen the wear of pillow cases? A. Always be sure to buy pillow cases that are large enough. If pillows have to be forced into the cases, the cases will soon wear out.

Q. How can I prevent the odor of cooking cabbage or onion from permeating the house? A. Keep a little vinegar boiling on the stove while cooking cabbage or onions.

Morning Smile

Pa's Viewpoint

"Is the world round?" a school m'am asked. "No, Ma'am." "Is it flat then?" "No, Ma'am." "Are you crazy, child? If the world isn't round and isn't flat, what is it?" "Pop says it's crooked."

Breast Of The Times

"Dad," began the lad of ten, "where do I send a letter to the Small Business Men's Bureau?" "Washington, D. C. my boy," replied papa. "Why?" "Oh, it's about my lemonade stand," explained the chip off the old block. "The corner drug store is giving me unfair competition. Open evenings."

Modern Etiquette

By Roberta Leo

Q. If someone has been given a birthday gift of wearing apparel, which happens to be the wrong size, is it proper to ask the donor if it can be exchanged? A. Certainly. Either ask the donor if he will have it changed to your size, or ask where it was bought so that you can exchange it.

Q. Is it all right for the bridegroom to give his bride something for the home as his wedding gift? A. This is not customary. His special gift to her should be something for her own personal adornment, usually jewelry of some kind.

Q. Is it permissible for a girl to refuse a man who wishes to "cut in" when dancing? A. No; she may, however, put him off until the next dance.
