ELLEN'S DIARY

The Vender With His Shinny Collection, Far Away Dream

The tinman's van—perhaps you have never seen one? Certainly none with more magic in it than was contained in that which in the long, long ago called at our home by the Strait! It was a four-wheeled wagon with a snug box-like enclosure for the wares and a seat in front for the vender. Drawn by a patient horse, it was one so familiar to the sight of small ones of those years, we could recognize it as a distance away, as ours can those motor-machines which come now to stop by our doors: the fisherman's smart truck, the meterman's conveyance, the gasman's great machine, and those of this or that salesman with whom farm-folks rub shoulders in this incredible era of farming at hand.

The vender, dead and gone now for years, was a kindly man, of good stature and appearance and always with a friendly smile for all. When he opened door of his van to us children it was to behold suddenly a page from some fairy tale come true. What a shining collection of tins was arranged there! Pails and pans and dippers in varying sizes, large and small, down to the tiny mugs—the "tin pints" from which many a youngster of the farm learned to sup his early liquid refreshment—learned to drink from it and later carried home to mother, gifts of berries in it gathered from pasture or stumpland about. Would the liquid have tasted better, we wonder if it came from the most fragile crystal or silver cup or gold, than that imbued from those shiny "tin pints" of old?

"Now will that be all for today, Missis?"
"Yes—all for this time."
How disappointed we children were when the door closed on that shining collection, which to look upon was to recall in this treal, after a pleasant holiday spent with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Ferguson, City.

Mr. and Mrs. Bruce MacLeod, Kensington, and Mr. and Mrs. Holly Wray, Charlottetown, left on Friday by car to visit friends in Montreal, Kingston and Toronto.

Miss Lydia Sims, whose marriage to Mr. Harold Howatt will take place at St. Paul's Church on Friday evening, was honored at the home of Mrs. Donald Campbell, Belvedere Avenue, who entertained jointly with Mrs. Roy Vessey and Mrs. David Jardine. The bride elect was escorted to a nicely decorated chair where she received many lovely gifts. The room was decorated in pink and white, and the attractively wrapped gifts were carried to the bride-to-be in an umbrella. The accompanying verses were read by Mrs. Roy Vessey, and arranged on the table by Mrs. Jardine. A dainty lunch was served by the hostesses and a social evening was enjoyed by the ladies.

Messrs. Lloyd and Orville Macdonald of Charlottetown and Mr. Stewart Macdonald, Covehead Road, have returned home after spending the week-end visiting their brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Macdonald of Sussex, N.B.

Mrs. Everett J. MacLeod and young children, Ellen and Bruce, left by air for Montreal, where they will be met by Mr. MacLeod. They will reside in Montreal, having spent the past year and half in Brussels, Europe. On P.E.I. Mrs. MacLeod and children visited relatives and friends.

CLARK - ESSERY WEDDING

Mr. and Mrs. Lowell Clark following their marriage in the Church of Christ, Summerside, by Rev. W.O.S. Weale. The bride was the former Beryl Essery.

Miss Gerene Gallant Is Bride Of Donald E. Craig

A pretty wedding was solemnized in the Summerside Presbyterian Church on September 23, when Miss Gerene Gallant, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. LeRoy Gallant, Summerside, and Donald E. Craig, son of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Craig of the Magdalen Islands.

The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion with baskets of multicolored gladioli and lupins. Mr. Raymond Pleau, church organist, played appropriate wedding music. The bride, given in marriage by her father, was lovely in her ballerina length wedding gown of Chantilly lace, featuring a fitted bodice with sabrina neck-line with sequin trim, and long sleeves coming to points. The full hoop skirt had a scalloped hemline with sequin trim. A Chantilly lace crown held in place the fingertip veil of tulle illusion and she carried a cascade of light pink gladioli.

Miss Ruth Ramsay, as bridesmaid, was gowned in pink nylon, embroidered with a small white flower, over taffeta, with matching headress, and she carried a

Man Marries His Dream Woman Has Eye On Security

Dear Mary Haworth: Appropos your exchange (Aug. 19) with R.D., everyone has a right to his own opinion. And my opinion is that the sustained companionship of two persons, who enjoy life together, is the first purpose of marriage.

Children are important to marriage, yes—but people don't marry with the primary aim of having children. They marry because they want to share the whole of their life with the other person. Children are a possible by-product of this arrangement. Sincerely, D.P.

WELCOMES KIDS

Dear Mary Haworth: I hope that the intrepid R.D. who recently entered the list of column controversies—to deny that begotting is the primary purpose of marriage—I hope that he now realizes the truth of the old proverb: "Never argue with a columnist!" You really laid him out!

However, I think this fellow Clark United Nations program, Mrs. A. Moore; Handicraft demonstration, Mrs. G. Dunning.

Chef Finds Novel Way To Check Personality

The chef and I had as breakfast guests four newspaper food editors, assembling in the Hotel Dover dining room at the recent Delmarva Chicken Contest.

The chef put on his glasses, looked professional and announced:

"With your permission I am a lover, not as a dad."

MALE PROPAGANDA
A woman may close her eyes during an embrace, but she goes into marriage with her eyes open! She certainly wants to possess her man; but she also wants what the other girls have—the ring, the house, the collection of gadgets; the dignity, prestige, status, etc., all dovetailed into the marriage pattern. And children are part of the pattern.

As I said, the man goes into it blindly, trustfully and urgently; and too often he wakens to find himself merely living with the woman and her children, possessed in her house, in her world of suburbia. He doesn't know what hit him; and it's his fault. He is the victim of male propaganda.

Hasn't man been saying for centuries that intellect is the last thing he wants of a woman? So he picks her on the basis of anything but that; then wonders why they don't speak the same language.

The best adjusted couples I know have intellect in common. They are somewhat educated, with broad interests and mutual respect for one another's intelligence. Neither possesses the other completely; and their kids are persons who also belong to themselves, not just to Mommie.

DEAR J.H.: I think you're got something here, in designating man as the romanticist and woman the realist in marriage. Mostly she wants security and he wants bliss; and that's how the "war of the sexes" begins.

The intrepid controversialist R.D. is a woman by the way; a divinely happy wife and mother; she says in a second letter: "Perhaps you mistook her for a man because she seemed so unfeeling towards another woman's tragedy (July 16) that sparked the debate—a wife denied children by a frigid husband. But wasn't R.D.'s view a sample of hard-boiled 'realism'?" Thus marking her truly female, by modern definition. And void of sympathy for her gentler sisters—of whom there are still a few. M.H.

going to judge your characteristics by the egg method!" At which he pulled out of his pocket a paper plate and continued:

"This is the textbook. Here are listed hard, medium or soft-boiled eggs; poached, scrambled or turned over fried eggs; sunny-side up, shirred or omelet.

"Please give me your orders. The kind you select reveals your characteristics as hereon printed."

"Hard-boiled, please," requested a foreign university nutrition graduate.

HER CHARACTERISTICS
"Ah, oui," chuckled the Chef. "By this choice I read it is apparent that you are persistent, dynamic and sincere."

"Poached, Chef, if you please," requested the young editor of a teenage magazine.

"Of course, Mademoiselle. This choice indicates you are speedy, peppy and intelligent."

"Now the food editor from Philadelphia."

"Medium-boiled, please."
ANOTHER PERSONALITY
"Because you are calm, cool, collected," read the Chef from the textbook. "And the lady from Baltimore."

"I'd like my eggs turned over."

"Proof that you are versatile, magnetic, dominant, equally good as a food writer or TV actress," grinned the chef.

"I'd like an omelet," I said.

"Sure sign, according to our text book, Madame, that you are indecisive, reliable and resourceful."

"How about you, Chef?" asked the nutritionist.

"I'll have my eggs shirred."
"Ah, then you are fastidious and romantic!"

"Merci, Mademoiselle. Also, I will order crisp bacon and broiled mushrooms on the side."

"One order?" asked the waitress.

"A big platterful, Mademoiselle, enough for everybody, so I'll please, with plenty of chilled canteloupe, toasted split rolls and a big pot of hot, hot coffee."

MR. AND MRS. JOHN L. READ

Trinity United Church Is Setting Of Pretty Wedding

Trinity United Church, Summerside, was the scene of a pretty wedding on August 29, at 2 p.m., when Anne Lowell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James B. Jenkins, Summerside, became the bride of John Lefurgey Read, son of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Read, Borden. Rev. C.R. Webber officiated. The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion with standards of multicolored mums, Mrs. Eric Sheen, organist, accompanied Miss Ruth Cairns as she sang "The Wedding Prayer."

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was lovely in her floor length wedding gown of imported Italian lace over satin, with fitted bodice and long sleeves forming neckline, a scalloped Sabrina neck-line and a skirt featuring a scalloped overskirt effect, back and front, with all over lace panels. A crown of deep pearls held in place the scalloped edge veil of bridal illusion, and she carried a cascade of Better Time roses centered with an orchid.

Mrs. Shelton Harris, sister of the bride, as matron of honor, and Miss Elizabeth Read, sister of the groom, as bridesmaid, were gowned, respectively, in shrimp and blue organza over crystalite. The gowns identically styled were floor length, with round neckline and short cap sleeves and they wore matching headresses. They carried nosegays of Aristocrat roses and Queen Elizabeth roses, respectively.

Mr. George Read was his brother's best man and Messrs. John Cameron and George Barton ushered the guests to pews marked with white satin bows centered with yellow mums.

Mrs. Jenkins chose for her daughter's wedding a navy shantung dress with white accessories and a corsage of white roses. The groom's mother was attired in lace over rose taffeta

MacInnis-Sheehan Wedding At Saint Alexies Church

St. Alexis Church, Rollo Bay, was the scene of a pretty autumn wedding on September 9th, when Miss Margaret Mary Sheehan became the bride of Peter Edward MacInnis. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Sheehan, Bear River, and the groom is the son of Mrs. Peter MacInnis and the late Peter MacInnis, New Zealand.

The altar was tastefully decorated with gladioli and mixed flowers. Rev. W.A. Keefe performed the ceremony and celebrated the nuptial mass. Mrs. George Christian was organist and the ladies choir sang appropriate hymns during the mass.

Gowned in traditional white, the bride was given in marriage by her father, and was attended the ushers were Mr. Albert Mallard.

Best man was Mr. Harold MacInnis, brother of the groom and the ushers were Mr. Albert Mallard and Mr. Edward Sheehan. Immediately following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents for a large number of invited guests, and later the couple left on a short honeymoon trip to the mainland.

On their return Mr. and Mrs. MacInnis will reside in "Souris, P.E.I.
