

Que. Pension Figures Given

QUEBEC (CP)—An actuarial report prepared for the Quebec government recommends a public portable pension plan that could provide a $50 annual pension for a person earning $2,000 a year.

His pension premiums would be $40 a year.

The report said there should be a deduction of $1,000 for all persons so that in effect, pension premiums would be paid only on salary in excess of $1,000.

The maximum revenue assessable would be $5,000 a year. Premium rates would be four per cent.

To be eligible for the full pension at least 30 years of contributions are required.

The following table shows how much a pensioner would get and how much he would pay under the plan for several wage brackets:

Revenue	Premiums Pension
$1,000	$40 $500
$2,000	$80 $750
$3,000	$120 $1,000
$4,000	$160 $1,250
$5,000	$200 $1,500

A total pension of $1,300 would be the maximum under the plan.

Man Who Named Spitfire Dies

EDINBURGH (AP)—The man who named Britain's most famous fighter plane of the Second World War, the Spitfire, is dead.

He was Sir Robert MacLean, former chairman of the Vickers Supermarine Aviation Company, which built the plane. The eight-year Spitfire, with the slower and older Hawker Hurricane, formed the backbone of the nation's air defence in the battle of Britain. It almost had another name. MacLean once related:

"In accordance with Supermarine tradition the name had to begin with an S. I wanted something quarrelsome and troublesome, spitting venom, a thoroughly nasty and unpleasant creature to meet."

He had decided on "Shrew" when a friend, Shakespeare's woman character who needed taming. But suddenly a much better name dawned on him—Spitfire. "MacLean died in Edinburgh Thursday, aged 80."
