HIGHWAY SAFETY

The recent Highway Safety Conference held in Ottawa brought together 350 Canadians from all walks of life. While these delegates represented a wide variety of occupations and interests, they were, nevertheless, inspired by a common determination to initiate action that would have some effect upon the unnecessarily high number of fatal accidents, which have perhaps in the minds of many become accepted as part and parcel of our way of life.

The Conference first of all served the very important purpose of concentrating the attention of a large group of Canadians on the problem. It is also directed the attention of the Press and the public generally to the problem. The decision of the Conference to proceed with the setting up of a National body to deal with highway safety and to promote and encourage provincial action along similar lines, was perhaps the most important result of the meeting.

Many Provinces have already made progress in the development of public awareness of the situation and have a variety of bodies who are concerned with bringing about improvement. While the organization of co-ordinating agencies and public action groups will do much to focus attention on highway safety, nevertheless, real improvement will only be brought about through the willingness of the individual both driver and pedestrian to accept his or her full responsibility in the matter.

Throughout the year but in particular at this time the farmer, depending upon his mood, may have reason to either bless or curse the man or company from which his machinery has been purchased.

Farm mechanization as the term may properly be interpreted probably goes back to the invention of the knotter for grain binders by Cyrus McCormac. Popularity, however, the term is usually applied to the era which saw the internal combustion engine used as the driving force in farm tractors.

A definite weakness in the program has been the tendency on the part of many machinery companies to adapt horse-drawn equipment for use with tractors. In many cases this has given a hybrid effect to mechanization—a very modern method of drawing a very outmoded implement.

Machinery companies which have been in the business frequently adhere to patterns which might well be discarded. For instance grain drills are turned out which provide no improvement in the grass seed box over the job of sixty years ago. The grain box which with horses could be operated for nearly an hour without refilling now needs to be replenished every ten to fifteen minutes when a tractor is used.

New models of the same machine are brought out which exhibit the old defects of their predecessors, e.g. axles which break, cog wheels which split, and bearings which fail to stand up under farm conditions. Indeed it may be stated that both the frequency of replacement and costs of parts for farm machinery is unnecessary high. Great as has been the contribution of the implement industry to agriculture, there is still a great need to be filled for better adapted, more durable and trustworthy equipment for farm work.

MARKET PROSPECTS (May 1st)

No one is able to predict with certainty the trend which markets will follow for the coming season. It is the opinion of good authority that the pattern will be as follows:

Dairy: 1955 production is expected to be about the same as last year. Population increases about 2.5% a year and consumption of dairy products will likely go up at the same time. There should not be any surpluses unless we get a better-than-average pasture season. Butter is still pegged at 58¢ until April 1956 so you can expect steady dairy product prices until then.

Cattle: Top grades expected to weaken a bit in late spring. Price change will depend largely on U.S. where there are still lots of cattle to come to market.

Hogs: Pork consumption dropping off so look for stronger prices in May and through to late summer. Spring farrowings promise a heavier fall run than last year—possibly 15% heavier—so expect weaker prices this fall than last.

Eggs: Looks like a good year for egg producers. After the spring rush of eggs is over look for firmer prices through summer, fall, and winter. If poultrymen still have last year's layers they may be wise to hang on to good hens to get some extra eggs until replacements are ready to lay.

Potatoes: Present high prices won't last long, are mostly due to partial failure of the U.S. winter potato crop. Look for a strong decline in prices between now and July and lower prices through summer and fall.

Feed: Western feed stocks are low, so prices may increase before next crop is off. Commercial feed prices are still high and no relief is in sight.

POTATO TARIFFS

Information already released in the Press indicates that the Island brief on the potato tariff question has been almost finalized and arrangements completed for its presentation.

This brief will next week be considered by the National Committee representative of the Canadian Horticultural Council and the Canadian Federation of Agriculture along with briefs from other parts of Canada. In this way a National brief will be developed which will present the picture as viewed by the different Provinces interested. It is not likely that the Island brief will be included in its entirety in the National one. It will, however, be presented on behalf of Island growers by a delegation consisting of a former federal civil servant, W. J. Callaghan; the chairman of the Potato Marketing Board, D. A. MacDonald; the secretary of the Potato Dealers Association and the secretary of the Federation of Agriculture.

PEMBROKE, Ont. (CP) — The Pembroke Standard-Observer celebrated its centenary Wednesday by publishing a special edition and shortening its name. The paper, which began tri-weekly publication a year ago, will be known as The Observer.

In Memoriam

ANGUS BLAQUIRE

The community of North Rustico was saddened on April 2, 1955 to learn of the death of Mr. Angus Blaquiere at the age of 76 years. Angus, as he was familiarly known, was a very respected resident of the community. He was a fisherman all his life and only last year retired to take things easier. He was always industrious and a good worker.

The day he suffered the stroke that was to bring about his death he was in the woods helping his grandson. In his spare time he repaired nets for the fishermen.

Apparently he was in good health when he left for the woods, but the strain of heavy lifting was too much for him. He was attended by Dr. J. R. Murchison who advised his removal to the Charlottetown Hospital. Despite all possible medical care he passed away on April 2, fortified by the last rites of the Church of which he was always a faithful member.

His wife predeceased him twenty-one years ago. He was always a kind and loving father. He leaves to mourn Mrs. Peter Pineau, Mrs. James Peters, Mrs. Roy Dotson, Mrs. Ralph Doucette, Mrs. Lawrence D. Gallant, all of Charlottetown, and Mrs. A. C. Pineau, North Rustico.

He is survived by a brother, Michael Blaquiere, and two sisters, Mrs. Andrew Martin, Charlottetown, and Mrs. Andrew Dolron, Mayfield.

His funeral which was largely attended was held at Stella Maris Church, North Rustico, on April 5th; the funeral Mass and service at the grave being conducted by the pastor, Rev. Eric Roblin.

The pallbearers were: Messrs. John Doyle, Arch Hartland, James Sevident, James J. Blaquiere, Lawrence Gauthier, and Paul C. Gallant.

Strange But True

By F. H. MacArthur

It's an established fact that man can no longer live by bread alone. He has to have some crust. An hour's industry will do more to produce cheerfulness, suppress evil rumors, and retrieve your affairs than a month's mooning. Providing blood worms for salt water anglers has grown into a business that totals $100,000 annually, and 100 men are employed in digging them out of the mud flats along the expansive coast of Nova Scotia.

The blood worm resembles a common earthworm and is about six inches long and as thick as a pencil. It must be handled carefully, because it is tender and extremely delicate.

A skilled digger averages 500 worms a day. The worms are taken to a washing plant, then packed in seaweed and shipped to wholesale bait dealers.

Anglers buy them for 75¢ to $1.00 a dozen.

Fish live in hot springs in Ceylon in which the water temperature averages 120 degrees Fahrenheit.

The owl was the badge of ancient Athens.

A skunk produces about 1/3 of an ounce of the smelly chemical used for defense in one week.

At a cost of about $67.50 each, John Fraser of Halifax had two fried eggs for breakfast. His wife hid $175 in the kitchen stove. When he lighted the stove the next morning to cook his eggs, $67.50 and money became thoroughly scrambled.

It took 27 years for coin to show, but Ernest Hartfield, 76 of Dover, England, is now richer by six pence (seven cents).

Hartfield swallowed the coin after it was hidden in a Christmas stocking for good luck Christmas Day, 1927, without knowing it. He showed a pain recently and X-ray showed the coin. The six-pence was given him after it was
