EDUCATION.

BY JOHN BOWRING.

A child is born—now take the germ, and make it
 A bud of moral beauty. Let the dew of Knowledge, and the light of virtue, wake it
 In richest fragrance and in purest hue;
 When passion's gust, and sorrow's tempest
 shake it
 The shelter of affection ne'er refuse,
 For soon the gathering hand of death will break it
 From its weak stem of life—and it shall lose
 All power to charm; but if that lovely flower
 Hath swell'd one pleasure, or subdued one pain,
 O who shall say that it has lived in vain,
 However fugitive its breathing hour?
 For vi-tue leaves its sweets wherever tasted,
 And scattered truth is never, never wasted.

PADDY IN CHINA.—During the occupation of Ningpo by the British an attempt was made to regain possession of it by the Chinese, for which purpose a band of lawless mountaineers had been bribed to make a night attack. They fought bravely, but, ignorant of the effect of grape, shell, and case-shot, they were mowed down like grass before the scythe. On each of the slain was found a small pouch, containing almost invariably six dollars. Lieutenant Ouchterlony, in his account of the operations, says: "An eye-witness has given an anecdote characteristic of the scene in the following words:—'As I was picking my way clear of the reeking mass which obstructed the street, the men, as they passed on, were snatching from the dead the little purses in which the discovery of the dollars had made; and as I stepped by one of them, a son of the Emerald Isle, who was examining the contents of one he had just appropriated from the girdle of a soldier, whose temples had been literally crushed in by a shot, I heard him say, 'Bad luck to ye! ye've been an' spint one of 'em; here's only five.'"

AN INCIDENT IN THE CHINESE WAR.—An officer has recorded that in crowning the right of the enemy's position the troops mingled with the Chinese, and passed through some lines of tents on the summit of the hill as they drove them out of their intrenchments. In his progress he was arrested by the groans of a wounded man, who was stretched on a couch in the corner of a tent; he gave the poor wretch, who had the button of a mandarin, some water, or performed some kindly office on him which humanity dictated, and the man, catching him by the arm as he was leaving the tent, pointed eagerly to a heap of clothes near him, and made signs that he should lift them up. He did so in the expectation that he should find beneath them some victim of the fray, but to his surprise his eyes fell upon a glittering heap of sycee silver; he looked to the mandarin for explanation, when he gesticulated earnestly that he should take it, which he accordingly did, and, assembling the men of his company who were with him, shared the spoils among them on the spot. They did what they could for the wounded man, and hurried on to overtake the column. When the fight was over, the officer went back with a few men to look after the grateful sufferer, when he found the tent consumed, and the mandarin scorched and blackened, and quite dead.—Ouchterlony's Account of the Chinese War.

MILITARY ANECDOTE.—Lieut.-Colonel Brown commanded the 28th at Barossa. He was said to have purposely allowed his regiment to be surrounded. Most officers would have felt nervous in such a situation; but it was reported that Brown addressed his men thus:—"Twenty-eighth, what confoundedly lucky fellows! This day you must be either extinguished or distinguished! Do as you like!" The 28th took their colonel at his word; the rear rank faced to the right about, and repulsed the enemy. And now the 28th were the number of the regiment both in front and back of their chakos.

PROPER SENSE OF SHAME.—A man seeing a physician at a distance, who had some years before attended him during a dangerous illness, turned aside and avoided meeting him. Being asked his reason, he said, "I am ashamed to meet him, because it is so long since I have been ill!"

To use kind language costs nothing at all; unkind costs always more or less; oftentimes more to him who employs it than even those to whom it is addressed. But every man is bound to anticipate that unkind language will produce the fruits of unkindness, that is, suffering in the bosom of others.

Several ancient surgical instruments have lately been dug up at Pompeii which bear a strong resemblance to those used for lithotomy in the present season.

To Weep for fear is childish; to weep for anger is womanish; to weep for grief is human; to weep for compassion is divine;—but to weep for sin is christian.
