Atlantic Area Future Bright, CN Economist Tells Group

MONCTON — A promising economic future for the Atlantic Provinces was forecast by J. D. Wahn, general economist of Canadian National Railways, when he addressed the local chapter of the Society of Industrial Cost Accountants of New Brunswick in Moncton Tuesday.

At the end of a detailed survey of the local and national economy, Mr. Wahn told his listeners: "I am sure the Atlantic Provinces, with the spirit which is evident among them today, will be able to overcome their difficulties. The next five years will see increasing efforts to develop this area of Canada to its full potential. I am confident they will meet with success."

Mr. Wahn pointed out that between the beginning of 1962 and the end of this year more than $3,000,000,000 will have been invested in the Atlantic Provinces. This capital investment covers such items as houses, schools, roads, primary and construction industries, utilities, manufacturing, trade, finance and commercial services.

"This massive investment, as well as providing many jobs in the construction and allied industries, is also increasing productive capacity and employment opportunities throughout the Atlantic Provinces," he said.

Looking ahead to 1966, Mr. Wahn said that the prospects for growth in the Canadian economy were reasonably good. "Accordingly, the prospects for the Atlantic Region are promising," he added.

Factors which would influence the local economy in 1966 included the completion of the lead-zinc concentrator and smelter near Bathurst; the heavy water plant and associated thermal power plant at Glace Bay; the Clairtone factory at New Glasgow, and the automobile assembly plant at Sydney.

DEVELOPMENTS LISTED

Continuing work on the enlarged project at Belledune Point, N.B.; the chemical complex at Dorchester Cape, N.B., the hydro plant at Baie Despoir, Nfld., the newsprint mill at Come-By-Chance, Nfld., expansion to the pulp mill at Grand Falls, Nfld., work on the P.E.I. causeway, the sinking of a new coal mine and modernization of others in Cape Breton, and the possibility of work starting on developing the Churchill Falls in Labrador were also mentioned as having an influence on the development of the region's economy.

Commenting on the outlook for various Atlantic industries, Mr. Wahn said that prospects for mining were favorable, mentioning iron ore from Labrador, lead and zinc from Bathurst, new copper ore bodies in Newfoundland and gypsum in the Maritimes.

"Coal production should increase with greater demand from thermal stations if technical difficulties can be overcome," he said.

Demand for pulp and paper is expected to increase. The Atlantic fishing industry, with larger and more efficient boats serving modern processing plants, should be in a better competitive position and the outlook for it is "good".

In agriculture, while income from potatoes next year is not expected to be as high as in 1965, poor crops in Europe could provide export outlets for Atlantic producers.

NEW PLANTS

The manufacturing sector, he said, should have another good year. He referred to some of the new plants opening up in the Maritimes and added. "The demand for steel is expected to increase and orders will have to be met for railway cars and rails."

The tourist industry brought $150,000,000 to the Atlantic provinces in 1965, and next year—with the boost of Newfoundland's 'Come Home Year' and advertising efforts by other provincial governments—should be even better.

"We have been told by various tourist officials that CNS red, white and blue fare system, which was pioneered in the Atlantic provinces, is contributing substantially to the growth of this important industry," said Mr. Wahn.

He detailed the extensive growth of the Canadian economy since 1961, and its prospects of further expansion. But he reminded his audience that the Atlantic Provinces Economic Council had shown that the economy of the region is still lagging behind that of other parts of Canada.

PAYS TRIBUTE

The speaker paid tribute to the efforts made by APEC, Industrial Estate of Nova Scotia, the New Brunswick Development Corporation, the Atlantic Development Board and similar bodies to overcome problems faced in the economic development of the region. He added: "Canadian National has also undertaken several industrial surveys of areas in the region to inform businessmen about the amenities in the area."

He went on "the most important resource of any area is the quality of its people.

"At present more and more skills and professional talents are being placed at a premium. It is impossible to overstress the importance of education and training in today's rapidly-changing industries . . . it augurs well for your future industrial development that you are putting so much emphasis on education and training."
