R. C. N. Has Personnel Now To Man Three Submarines

OTTAWA (CP) — The Royal Canadian Navy now has sufficient trained personnel to man three submarines, officials said Friday.

They were elaborating on a statement made Thursday in Toronto by Defence Minister G. R. Pearkes that naval planners are giving serious consideration to construction of a small number of submarines in Canadian shipyards.

The RCN's submariner training began as the result of the need for stationing of submarines at Halifax to give the navy more training in anti-submarine tactics. The RCN is almost entirely an anti-submarine navy, a job in which it specialized during the Second World War.

One advantage of the submarine which gives a great deal of concern to Canadian defence officials is its ability to travel under ice with little fear of detection.

Consequently, Soviet submarines could arrive undetected in Hudson Bay and strike at North American targets with missiles. Some authorities say they believe the only method of detecting enemy submarines under ice will be by using submarines. A submarine, incidentally, can be built for between $10,000,000 to $12,000,000, about half the price of a destroyer.

A very enjoyable whist party was held at Mr. Robert Campbell's home on the Whim Road Farm Forum group. Six tables were in play and prizes were won by Mr. George Clary and Mrs. George MacKinnon. Lunch was served by the ladies present.

Mrs. Lawrence Stewart was hostess to the Whim Road Women's Institute on Tuesday evening February 4th. Eight members and three visitors were present and answered roll call by presenting a birthday or sympathy card. Next meeting to be held at Mrs. Richard Campbell's.

Mr. Wesley Campbell has returned to his home after spending a few days in the Prince Edward Island Hospital. His friends are hoping he will soon be restored to good health.

Commission Reports Will Face New Federal Gov't

By JOHN LEBLANC
OTTAWA (CP)—Canada's post-war government will have on its doorstep—either right after March 31 or from time to time—a basketful of recommendations from royal commissions and other inquiry bodies calling for decision.

At the moment, 13 such major reports—perhaps a record for a given time—are in various stages.

Some are known to have been presented to the government, but no action up to now. The first one may have been submitted without having been made public yet because of printing delays. Others are in varying degrees of preparation, ranging from preliminaries to the writing of the reports.

Major reports in the hands of the government is that of the royal commission on broadcasting headed by R. M. Fowler of Montreal, turned in last March. It proposed many changes in Canada's radio-TV setup, including an independent regulatory agency and a basically new system of financing the publicly-owned CBC.

The Liberals did not act on it before going out of office last year, and the Progressive Conservative government has done nothing about it to date.

Another big one coming up is the report of the royal commission on Canada's economic prospects headed by Toronto economist Walter Gordon.

The Gordon commission turned in a preliminary report a year ago and a series of about 25 sub-reports since, but the main report forecasting the country's economic future is still to be made known.

It is to be submitted at any time now are recommendations of a three-year-old royal commission on Canada's coastal shipping trade headed by Mr. Justice W. F. Spence of the Ontario Supreme Court.

Implementation of this commission's findings could have a big effect on benefits accruing to Canada from the St. Lawrence Seaway's navigation works, scheduled to be opened in the spring of next year.

A royal commission examining Newfoundland's financial position since Confederation since 1949 has held hearings last fall and is reporting shortly. This could mean a better fiscal break for the new province. The commission was under Chief Justice J. McLaughlin of New Brunswick.

Another report that could be a political hot potato was made public Feb. 4. That was the outcome of a commission inquiry headed by Hon. R. L. Kellough, recently retired Supreme Court of Canada Justice, which recommended in favor of the CPR in a dispute between the railway and its firemen.

Company-union negotiations on the issue were reported at Montreal but they fell through Friday and the scrap now is back to the cabinet's door.

EASTERN GUARDIAN

FUNERAL SUNDAY — The funeral of the late David W. Stewart was held on Sunday with a short service at his late residence followed by a funeral service at the North Presbyterian Church. Services were conducted by his pastor, Rev. Carl Currie assisted by Rev. Donald Nicholson, Bellast.

Songs were "The Lord's Prayer" and "What a Wonderful World We Live In." A favorite of the deceased, "Beyond the Stars" was rendered by Mr. Stewart. The funeral was very largely attended. The casket bearers were five grandsons: Howard Reid, Guy Reid, Garnet Reid, David Giffis, Charles and William Graham. In interment was in the Murray Harbour North Cemetery.

in possession of the government for several months have been reported from a commission headed by Chief Justice J. C. McRuer of the Ontario High Court of Justice on the law of insanity in court cases and from a committee headed by Mr. Justice Gerald Fauteux of the Supreme Court of Canada on probation and remissions for penitentiary prisoners.

PROBES PSYCHOPATHS
Chief Justice McRuer also is running an inquiry for the government on sexual psychopaths.

A complex report expected to be received shortly is that of a royal commission on patents, copyrights, trade marks and industrial design which has been working for about two years under Chief Justice J. L. Tasley of Nova Scotia.

All these investigations were set up by the Liberal government. Since taking office, the Conservatives have launched several more.

A royal commission on Canada's energy resources under Henry Borden, Toronto lawyerindustrialist, started hearings this month and its main report is not expected for two years. However, the commission plans an interim report as soon as possible on certain aspects of the gas industry.

NEW ONE IN APRIL
Another commission inquiry, under President Andrew Stewart of the University of Alberta, will start hearings in April on the price spreads on fish and farm products between producers and consumer.

John Bracken, former national Conservative leader named Jan. 31 to conduct a one-man inquiry into the distribution of railway boxcars for Prairie grain movement, hopes to make his recommendations to the cabinet well before the end of the current crop year July 31.

And, finally, Professor Robert F. Clark of the University of British Columbia is to report to the government, probably this summer, on his study of the U.S. social security system with a view to possible changes in Canada's old age pension program.

The adults in three families, formerly citizens of Holland, namely Mr. and Mrs. Bert Haneveld, Mr. and Mrs. John Brink, and Mr. and Mrs. Peter Van Shuppen, became Canadian citizens and received a hearty welcome in Trinity Church, which they have attended for several years.
