CHAPTER LII.

'Oh, man, man!' cried Robert Penfold,

'you ask more of me than flesh and blood can bear. What shall I say? What shall I do?'

Helen replied, calmly, 'Take my hand, and let us die together, since we cannot live together in honor.'

General Rolleston groaned, 'For then, I have traversed one ocean, and searched another, and found my child. I am nothing to her—nothing. Oh, who would be a father!' He sat down oppressed with shame and grief, and bowed his stately head in manly but pathetic silence.

'Oh, papa, papa!' cried Helen, 'forgive your ungrateful child! And she knelt and sobbed, with her forehead on his knees.

Then Robert Penfold, in the midst of his own agony, found room in that great suffering heart of his for pity. He knelt down himself, and prayed for help in this bitter trial. He rose haggard with the struggle, but languid and resigned, like one whose death-warrant has been read.

'Sir,' said he, 'there is but one way. You must take her home; and I shall stay here.'

'Leave you all alone on this island!' said Helen, 'Never! If you stay here, I shall stay to comfort you.'

'I decline that offer. I am beyond the reach of comfort.'

'Think what you do, Robert,' said Helen, with unnatural calmness. 'If you have no pity on yourself, have pity on us. Would you rob me of the very life you have taken such pains to save? My poor father will carry nothing to England but my dead body. Long before we reach that country I loved so well, and now hate for its stupidity and cruelty to you, my soul will have flown back to this island to watch over you, Robert. You bid me to abandon you to solitude and despair. Neither of you two love me half as much as I love you both.'

General Rolleston signed deeply. 'If I thought that—' said he. Then, in a faint voice, 'My own courage fails me now. I look into my heart, and I see that my child's life is dearer to me than all the world. She was dying, they say. Suppose I send Moreland to the Continent for a clergyman, and marry you? Then you can live on this island forever. Only you must let me live here, too, for I could never show my face again in England after acting so dishonorably. It will be a miserable end of a life passed in honor; but I suppose it will not be for long. Shame can kill as quickly as disappointed love.'

'Robert, Robert!' cried Helen, in agony.
The martyr saw that he was master of the situation, and must be either base or very noble—there was no middle way. He leaned his head on his hands, and thought with all his might.

'Hush! said Helen; 'he is wiser than we are. Let him speak.'

'If I thought you would pine and die on the voyage, no power should part us.
But you are not such a coward. If my life depended upon yours would you not live?'

'You know I would.'

'When I was wrecked on White Water Island, you played the man. Not one woman in a thousand could have launched a boat, and sailed her with a boat-hook for a mast, and—'

Helen interrupted him. 'It was nothing.
I loved you. I love you better now.'

'I believe it, and therefore I ask you to rise above your sex once more, and play the man for me. This time it is not my life you are to rescue, but what is more precious still; my good name.'

'Ah! that would be worth living for,' cried Helen.

'You will find it very hard to do; but not harder than to sail a boat without a mast. See my father, Michael Penfold.
See Undercliff, the expert. See the Solicitor, the counsel. Sift the whole story; and above all, find out why Arthur Wardlaw dared not enter the witness-box. Be obstinate as a man; be supple as a woman; and don't talk of dying when there is a friend to be rescued from dishonor by living and working.'

'Die! while I can rescue you from death or dishonor! I will not be so base. Ah, Robert, Robert, how well you know me!'

'Yes, I do know you, Helen. I believe that great soul of yours will keep your body strong to do this brave work for him you love, and who loves you. And as for me, I am man enough to live for years upon this island, if you will only promise me two things.'

'I promise, then.'

'Never to die, and never to marry Arthur Wardlaw, until you have reversed that lying sentence which has blasted me.
Lay your hand on your father's head, and promise me that.'

Helen laid her hand upon her father's head, and said: 'I pledge my honor not to die, if life is possible, and never to marry any man, until I have reversed that lying sentence which has blasted the angel I love.'

'And I pledge myself to help her,' said General Rolleston, warmly. 'For now I know you are a man of honor, I have too often been deceived by eloquence to listen to that. But now you have proved by your actions what you are. You pass a forged check, knowing it to be forged! I'd stake my salvation it's a lie. There's my hand.
God comfort you! God reward you, my noble fellow!'

'I hope he will, sir,' sobbed Penfold.
'You are her father, and you take my hand perhaps that will be sweet to think of by and by; but no joy can enter my heart now, it is broken. Take her away at once, sir.
Flesh is weak. My powers of endurance are exhausted.'

General Rolleston acted promptly on this advice. He rolled up her rugs, and the things she had made, and Robert had the courage to take them down to the boat.

Then he came back, and the General took the bag to the boat.

All this time the girl herself sat wringing her hands in anguish, and not a tear. It was beyond that now.

As he passed Robert, the General said 'Take leave of her alone. I will come for her in five minutes. You see how sure I feel you are a man of honor.'

When Robert went in, she rose and tottered to him, and fell on his neck. She saw it was the death bed of their love, and she kissed his eyes, and clung to him.
They moaned over each other, and clung to each other in mute despair.

The General came back, and he and Robert took Helen, shivering and fainting, to the boat. As the boat put off, she awoke from her stupor, and put out her hands to Robert with one piercing cry.

They were parted.
