Push-Button Phones
Coming For Canadians

MONTREAL (CP) — Push-button telephones are closer to being a reality in Canada than even the telephone companies expected a couple of years ago. They are already in regular use at two Montreal exchanges and Montreal International Airport and also at North Bay, Ont., and Toronto International Airport.

"There's no comparison between the push-button phone and dial phone," says Nick Powell of Bell Telephone Company, who has one of the phones in his home. "They're faster and more convenient and mis-dialed numbers are a thing of the past."

"Their development and installation moved ahead faster than we expected," he said.

But the curiosity of push-button phones—still new to most Canadians and unseen by many—will be superseded when Canada's first electronic telephone switching system is installed at the site of the 1967 Montreal World's Fair.

Electronic switching, or ESS, is technologically ahead of most new telephone developments in the last few years in that it is endowed with money and logic. Subscribers on ESS exchanges will be able to dial a number and have a call transferred automatically from a phone at home or in the office to wherever he may be located, or housewives will be able to push a button and turn on their stoves—again through the telephone brain.

"The new system is so flexible that in future it will provide additional services not yet dreamed of," says Tom Babinski of Northern Electric Company which developed the Canadian system.

With the telephone brain at the central switching office, customers will be able to bring third or fourth parties into a conversation in progress by dialing a number.

WILL HELP HOUSEWIVES
"Housewives will be able to call the supermarket and by dialing code numbers place an order for groceries," said Mr. Babinski.

Too far-fetched? Not really, seeing that such an exchange is already doing these chores for people in Succasunna, N.J., and Northern Electric are adapting the system to enable it to serve Canadian customers living in small communities.

"It will use most of the sophisticated computer techniques of its big brother but will be suited to Canadian pocket books," said Mr. Babinski.

The new system will mean faster calling and times will be calculated in millionths of a second instead of thousandths.

"It will also cut down expenses for the telephone company when these machines are installed, by substituting transistors for wires—and the machine's own brain will type up a list of repairs needed to keep it functioning."

The new systems will mean no one can ever get far from a telephone and the brain will always help people to find one another.

The bidding:

Pass 1 NT Pass 2
Pass 3 ♣ Pass 4
Pass 5 ♣ Pass 5

Opening lead—ten of clubs. One of the most dramatic hands in the match between Italy and the United States in 1963 was this one played on Bridgeorama before a large Italian audience.

Robert Jordan (playing with Arthur Robinson) got to five diamonds on the bidding shown. He ruffed the club lead, cashed the ace of diamonds, and continued with a diamond to the king.

At this point both the audience and the commentators at the microphone all thought that Jordan would eventually go down one. He obviously had to lose a diamond and two hearts. However, Jordan proceeded to make the contract, much to the astonishment of everyone present. Furthermore, there was nothing the Italian East-West pair could do to prevent him from making eleven tricks.

Jordan cashed the ace of clubs at trick four, discarding a heart, and ruffed a club. He then entered dummy with a spade to the queen and ruffed another club.

Next, after cashing the A-K of spades and trumping a spade, he ruffed dummy's last club as West, utterly helpless, followed suit.

By this time eleven tricks had been played and Jordan had won them all. The audience, partisan though it was, applauded enthusiastically as Jordan brought home the contract. The three losers he started with had dwindled to two as a result of the cross-ruff.

The hand brought the United States team a gain of 450 points, since the Italian North-South pair at the other table went down one at the same contract. The bidding went:

West North East South
Pass Pass 1 ♣ 2
Pass 3 ♣ Pass 3
Pass 4 ♣ Pass 4
Pass 4 ♣ Pass 5

The play was much simpler at this table. West led a heart and East played the A-K and another heart, which West ruffed. Declarer went down because he had a chance to get started.
