Oral Polio Vaccine Urged In Addition To Salk Serum

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP)—A few drops of vaccine on a cube of sugar—and a savage crippler could be eliminated.

The weapon to conquer polio has been discovered.

Why, then, is the end of this dreaded disease not being written everywhere?

A few communities have used vaccine to whip polio entirely. Others have halted epidemics. And it's the hopeful goal of scientists that polio eventually can be eliminated, much as smallpox has been.

Dave County (Miami), Florida staged a guinea pig trial vaccination in 1960 with such spectacular results that not a single case of polio has occurred there in the last two years.

MANY COMPLICATIONS

But even with a preventive that is safe, sure and easy to take, the campaign against eradication has only begun. The complications are many.

To most persons, "Salk" and "Sabin" are just names given to polio vaccine.

Few know that it you get the Salk vaccine by a needle, it won't keep you from spreading the disease.

But the Sabin oral vaccine will. Even if you've had the full series of Salk injections, you're urged to take an oral Sabin.

The Salk vaccine works on the virus at a later stage when it is in the bloodstream. In the meantime, however, the virus is highly contagious and can be easily transmitted.

The oral vaccine, however, not only protects the individual who takes it but it helps prevent the growth of polio virus when it enters the body and passes into the intestinal tract —thus preventing its spread.

The problem of eradication is further complicated by the fact that there are many kinds of polio. Broadly speaking, the various strains are classified under three main types, I, II, and III.

"To make a community nonsusceptible, vaccines must be given in all three types," said Dr. James Bryan, of the poliomyelitis surveillance unit of the U.S. public health department.

Records at the public health service communicable disease centre here show that the person most likely to take advantage of the vaccine offer is the man who is already health-conscious enough to have had his first vaccine, or his Salk shots.

"Polio seems to seek out the unvaccinated in a heavily-populated place," says Dr. Bryan, "and outbreaks occur in these so-called 'hard-core' areas, the low-income neighborhood."

REMOTE DANGER

These people are hard to reach for several reasons. Their lives are so full of problems—getting enough food, heat, clothing, handing onto jobs—that the danger of polio seems to be relatively remote.

What, then, is the magic number that has to be vaccinated in a community, so that the disease will virtually disappear?

"If 80 per cent could be vaccinated with oral vaccine, particularly the pre-school children in lower income groups, we could eliminate much of it," Bryan said.

"But there's no way of crystal-balling this. Unless the newborn are vaccinated as they come along, you could have a situation of immunity for many years, then an outbreak such as would occur if a case of measles were brought to a South Sea Island for the first time."

Donkey Baseball Slated Here Tues.

Hilarious donkey baseball that has left people laughing from coast to coast in the United States and Canada comes to Charlottetown Tuesday evening under the sponsorship of the Charlottetown Kiwanis Club.

The spectacle will be staged at Memorial Field at 7.15 and it is expected that a number of local ball players will be taking part. All proceeds will go towards Kiwanis service works among the city's youth.

It has been said that playing the piano with mittens on or eating corn-on-the-cob through a picket fence are easy tasks compared with playing baseball from the backs of donkeys.

Eleven donkeys take part in the show. Seven are used in the field by the defensive team — only the pitcher and catcher play unmounted — and four are used for batsmen.

The rules are simple. But made complicated by the fact that the donkeys are trained to almost always do the wrong thing.

Players are required to stay mounted anytime they are taking part in a play. The bases are circles four feet in diameter and "runners" must be mounted and two of the donkeys feet must be within the circle.

A player may go on foot to retrieve a batted ball, but must be on the donkey's back when throwing it.

When a batter hits the ball he mounts the donkey and gets ready to circle the bases, if the donkey is willing. Not known for being co-operative, the donkey sometimes heads for third base. If a batter in two attempts is unable to ride the donkey between the bases, he is automatically out.

Bud Smith Enterprises of Stouffville, Ont., supply the donkeys.

Peril Is Seen In Heart Drug

BELFAST (Reuters)—A leading British medical expert Friday warned that some drugs used for treating heart disease might have dangerous after effects.

He said doctors should stop treating heart disease as a routine matter with drugs which reduce the clotting of the blood.

Professor John McMichael, professor of medicine at London University, attacked anti-coagulant drugs at the British Medical Association's annual meeting here.

He said that for the chance of saving seven people the lives of four were being gambled with. Possible side effects of the drugs include cerebral hemorrhage, he said.

SMASH NUMBERS GAME

NEW YORK (AP)—Police reported Friday they had broken a Bronx numbers game operation that was doing a $35,000,000 a year business. The police raided two apartments Thursday and arrested seven men—five of whom they had arrested in similar raids in Queens last month.

AWARDED £2 DAMAGES

LONDON (Reuters)—Oil millionaire Nubar Gulbenkian, 66, Friday was awarded £2 nominal damages against the BBC for breach of contract. A high court judge found that the BBC had contracted to give Gulbenkian a free tele-recording of an interview program in which he appeared.

The bidding:

1♣	Dble.	2♣	2♥
3♣	4♥

Opening lead—ace of hearts.

Bridge is not played in a vacuum. The participants see only 26 cards when the play starts and not the 52 cards seen in the diagram. Naturally, seeing only 26 cards, they may not play their cards as well as if they saw all four hands. Being human, they may err.

The declarer, and the defenders likewise, frequently trade upon the deficiency. They made odd-looking plays in actual combat that they would not make if all 52 cards were exposed, and they do this because these plays offer them a chance to induce a mistake by the opposition.

Look at this hand where South stole the contract by making an unnatural play. West led the ace and another heart. Declarer, sizing up his chances, won the heart in dummy, cashed the ace of spades, and returned a low spade.

East assumed from this line of play that declarer had a singleton spade and therefore played low instead of going up with the jack and later established the fifth spade in dummy as a trick and wound up making five hearts.

But suppose declarer had won the heart at trick two in his hand and led the jack of spades for a finesse, as most players would. Then he would have gone down one. East would take the king and return a club to put South out of his misery.

The beauty of South's play is that it gives him a chance to make the contract regardless of where the king is located. If West has it, the hand is sure to make because dummy's queen gets established for a valuable card discard.

If East has it, then it is just as well not to attempt the losing finesse, and, in fact, it is better because East has a chance to go wrong.

It is true that South may cost himself a 30-point trick if it turns out that West has the king of spades, but who wouldn't pay a 30-point premium to insure a game?

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:
A X Y D L B A A X E

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophies, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.
