Doctor Leads Argentina's Voting Race

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — Arturo U. Illia, 62-year-old country doctor, surged into a strong popular-vote lead Monday in the Argentine presidential race but still was far from victory.

With vote tabulations nearing an end, Illia had a lead of almost 5,000,000 votes over his nearest rival but still lacked the 51-per-cent majority needed to seal victory in the electoral college on July 31.

At his home in the Cordoba hill town of Cruz Del Eje, Illia appeared confident, however, that he would become Argentina's 21st president on Oct. 12.
