Cook's Corner

FRUIT CUSTARD PIE 2 cups sugar, 1/2 teaspoon salt, 2 cups milk, 2 eggs, separated, 1/2 cup pineapple juice, 2 tablespoons lemon juice, 1 cup seedless raisins, 1 cup crushed pineapple, drained, 1 teaspoon vanilla, 1 baked, 9-inch pastry shell, pinch of salt, 1/2 cup shredded coconut. Combine 1/2 cup sugar, salt, and constant in top of double boiler; add milk gradually, and cook over simmering water, stirring constantly, until thickened. Beat egg yolks slightly, and slowly add hot mixture; return to top of double boiler, and continue cooking about 3 minutes. Remove from heat, and cool. Heat fruit juices; add raisins; simmer 10 minutes; cool. Fold this mixture and pineapple into custard. Add vanilla. Pour into pastry shell. Beat egg whites until stiff; add salt. Continue beating, adding remaining sugar a little at a time. Cover pie with meringue; sprinkle with coconut, and bake in moderate oven, 350 degrees F. about 15 minutes, or until lightly browned. Cool.

DOROTHY DIX'S COLUMN

Self-Invited In-Laws

Woman Tired Of Being Hostess To Week-End Squatters DEAR MISS DIX: Perhaps I am the selfish one in the case, don't hesitate to give it to me. My husband and I are bothered with "week-end squatters". My husband's only brother and his family call on us every week-end - not just for a meal, they come Saturday evening and stay until 9 or 10 o'clock Sunday. We are never able to accept invitations for those two days without being stopped dead in our tracks by having them arrive just as we are about to leave. We live in the same town, so my husband and his brother see each other frequently. We have two married daughters, and now that our family is larger, we'd like to get out together. ANSWER: Your only fault is an excess of hospitality and a deep regard for other people's feelings, and in both respects it's better to have too much than none at all. BE FIRM However, no one likes to be imposed upon, which is certainly what your in-laws are doing to you. Fortunately, there are many ways to stop their inconsiderate visiting. Some firmness is needed, so brace yourself to get into action. Next week-end when they are bringing their visit to a close, inform them that you have accepted an invitation for dinner at someone's the following Sunday. Better still, line up invitations for both Saturday night and Sunday afternoon. Perhaps they'll be back the following week, in which case present your plans for the next week-end. No one's feelings should be hurt by this tactful maneuvering and it should insure some free week-ends for you and your husband. Just don't be so easy; think of yourself once in a while and don't become a "taken-for-granted" hostess. DEAR MISS DIX: I am a 17-year-old girl with one major problem. I have no trouble in getting dates, but after I've gone out with a boy once, I lose interest in him. This seems childish, I know, and, though I've tried to be sensible about the matter, I can't seem to change. Even my mother scolds me and says I'm too particular. FRAN ANSWER: Since both you and your mother recognize your trouble, the solution lies in taking stock of yourself, why you become tired of the boys, and what there is about them that disappoints you. Being discriminating is, in itself, no great fault, but the motives underlying your fussiness may be wrong. If you look for surface qualities only, while deprecating the personalities of entertainers, you are being shallow. If you seek more expensive entertainers than most of the boys provide, it's a sign of selfishness and greed. With Mom's help, make an analysis of your disposition and see what you can do to improve it before you become friendless. DEAR MISS DIX: I enjoy writing to bedridden people, but have one question. When writing to someone I don't know personally, should I sign my name or say, "Someone who is interested in you"? ANSWER: By all means sign your name. If you do an individual a favor, he would certainly like to know the identity of his benefactor; if you are writing to children, their parents would like to be able to thank you. Miss Nissen cannot reply personally to readers but will answer problems of general interest through this column.

Morning Smile

Not So Queer A very elderly professor who had lived alone for many years was thought to be a bit queer. A woman was quite sure of it when, one day, she paused to watch the old man holding a watering can poised above a flower box. At last she called, "Professor, there's no bottom in that watering can." "It's quite all right," he assured her. "These are artificial flowers I'm watering."

Better English

By G. G. Williams Eye to Future Mabel arrived home with an engagement ring on her finger. "What kind of fellow is the man to whom you are engaged?" her father asked. "Well, he says he had always wanted a home," Mabel explained. "And he likes ours very much!"

Household Scrapbook

Cleaning Reed Furniture The best way to clean reed furniture is to take it out of doors when the sun is warm and turn the garden hose on it. Allow it to dry thoroughly before taking back into the house. Doughnuts Doughnuts will not absorb so much fat if one-fourth teaspoon of ground ginger is added. It will also add to the flavor of the doughnuts. Hot Dishes A dish of any hot food can be cooled quickly if it is set in a pan of cold water which has been well salted. The first railway mail service in the west was carried over the Winnipeg-Brandon line in 1882. The imperial gallon used in Canada is 20 per cent larger than the United States gallon.

How Can I... Modern Etiquette

By Anne Ashley By Robert Lee Q. How can I prevent sputtering of gas burners? A. When the gas stove sputters, it is a sign that the burners are dirty and need attention. Clean the holes out with a wire or pipe cleaner. The sputtering is caused by the dirt. Q. How can I make inexpensive dish towels? A. Cotton crepe, cut into one-yard lengths, makes very good dish towels. They do not require any hemmings nor ironing. They give a fine polish to glassware, do not shed lint, and are very inexpensive. Q. How can I keep the air in the refrigerator sweet? A. A saucer of powdered charcoal kept in the refrigerator and renewed every couple of weeks will absorb odors and purify the air. Q. When a woman is playing golf with a man, isn't it proper to allow her always to drive first, whether the honor is hers or his? A. No. The woman should abide by the rules of the game, and she drives first only when it is her honor. Q. If a girl takes a young man with her to a party, and he is a stranger to all the other guests, how should she introduce him? A. She should introduce him only to the hostess, who will, if she knows her duty, introduce him to the other guests. Q. Does a hostess invite her guest "to dinner" or "for dinner"? A. She invites her guest "to dinner," although she may have chick-en for dinner.

Hats For Coronation Year

The attractive hat at right is called "Cafe Creme," a coffee-and-cream straw bonnet that might be worn at one of the big British race meetings where fashions are important as horses. It was designed by Kate Day of London, one-time milliner to Norman Hartnell, the Queen's dressmaker. In this festive royal year London milliners are determined that hats shall be worthy of the occasion. A black straw bonnet trimmed with chimney-sweep brush-heads, entitled "Chimney Sweep," is one of the fashions for the Coronation season.—(CP Photo).

Bridal Attire Reflects Coronation Year Trends

LONDON, (CP)—The color and gaiety of Coronation Year are reflected even in the choice of wedding finery for Easter brides. Retailers say that many women are asking for something special in bridal wear to mark the Queen's crowning. Many last-minute orders call for dresses in pale yellow, deep ivory and a blue-tinted frosty white that suggests silver. These shades tend towards the gold, silver and cream of the dresses worn under Coronation robes. Those desiring even more color show preference for the delicate, pearly tones of a sea shell—ame, thyst, flush pink, and a blue-grey shade with the shimmer of mother-of-pearl. The traditional wish of a bride to look like a queen is also seen in the popularity of pearl and diamond tiaras instead of orange blossom, for holding the veil in place. A truly "royal" outfit, with rhinestone coronet topping the veil, is a pure white satin with ermine-trimmed "batteau" neckline, a loose over-skirt cut and trimmed like peacock robes worn over a straight skirt. Suggested touch of color is a bouquet of blood-red roses. Graceful Gowns Most bridal styles this year are cut on the lines of gala evening gowns for royal balls. Big skirts sweep out in graceful trains, and bodices are much as always with different styles of necklines and traditional sleeves. Many brides still favor fitted boleros that can be removed to provide a decollete evening gown. A new winner, for those who can't afford it and want to ensure they don't shiver in Britain's chill Easter winds, is nylon lace with a wool finish. This British-made material, sold here for the first time this year, comes to the British market after export sale in Canada, the United States and other countries. It seems that brides change along with bridal fashions. Eileen Ascroft, writing in the Evening Standard, notes that brides chosen for Britain's stately homes have changed from gaily girls to mannish. In the gay '90s, scintillating Gertie Miller became Countess of Dudley, and Rosie Bootle quit the footlights to marry the Marquess of Headfort. Sylvia Grey entertained a King, Edward VII, and received jewelled gifts from his son, the Duke of Clarence. This year, the Earl of Dalkeith, one-time suitor to Princess Margaret, married fashion model Jane McNeill. The present Duchess of Rutland was previously mannequin, while Viscountess Boyle carries on the model career Anne Cumming Bell, a blonde she started as Catherine Carlton.

The Stars Say... For Tomorrow

THIS is a day in which to yield to the inspirational and the meditative rather than to the frivolous or even to the practical. Do not worry about trifles. Household duties or business problems can wait. Relax during this twenty-four hour period and, in social relationships, follow a program of grace and good fellowship. Where the young are concerned, it should be a lively and festive day but even youth should remember on this Easter Sunday to give some time to contemplative and spiritual pursuits. If It Is Your Birthday If tomorrow is your birthday, you may look ahead to a year of great business expansion, growth and progress, promotion and financial emolument. Unexpected tokens of appreciation and preferment should come to you — all the reward of exceptional talent, versatility, business acumen and that high-powered personality which is innately yours. You may have waited a long time for such recognition, so when it comes, accept it with grace and realize that achievement has resulted from your peculiar qualifications. Do not be patronizing with those less favored. Never before have you had such a chance to prove your generosity and inherent kindness! A child born on this day will be bounteously endowed with talent, versatility, idealism and true nobility. Day After Tomorrow This is a day on which you should be particularly receptive to the ideas of others. You may have definite plans of your own, but listen to associates and you may be surprised at their practical adaptations of projects you consider exclusively yours. Do not let minor obstacles cause you unhappiness with the Moon in Capricorn this day, home renovations and gardening are particularly favored. In keeping with the springtime season, get busy. Working with the hands is one of the surest ways of attaining the peace and happiness.
