Organizes Aid Society Campaign

Mr. Glynford P. Allen, (above), supervisor Welfare Service, Family Allowance Division of Nova Scotia department of National Health and Welfare has been in Charlottetown since November 9 as organizer for the Children's Aid Society of P. E. I.

On November 17, at a public meeting in Charlottetown, the Children's Aid Society of P. E. I. became a reality. Mr. Allen attributes his success in such a short period of time to the willing co-operation received from all the individuals and organizations he contacted.

He commended in particular the L. P. U. the Women's Institutes, the C. W. L. and the town of Summerside under the leadership of His Worship Mayor Henry Wedge. Mr. Allen also emphasized the important role played by the press and radio in this Province.

Mr. Allen's services were made available through the efforts of the local director of Family Allowances, Major Alan Nicholson. A campaign for funds, with minimum objective $10,000 is now being conducted under Mr. Allen's leadership.

Britons In Singapore Are Worried

By LARRY ALLEN (For J. M. Roberts, Jr.) Associated Press News Analyst SINGAPORE, Nov. 20—(AP)—Britons in this crown colony are looking at developments in Indo-China with furrowed brows.

They regard Indo-China as the "first line of defence" of rubber- and tin-rich Malaya—and they're worried about French military setbacks. British officials and the commanders of the Far Eastern land and air forces find the news of Communist Vietnam successes in Indo-China disquieting. If Vietnamese troops succeeded in cutting deep into Indo-China and threaten Thailand, Malaya would be in for a hot time.

British military and Government sources make no secret of the fact that they consider the Indo-China situation "very dangerous."

They wonder whether the French forces can hold a strong line along the Red River in Indo-China and halt the advances. There is speculation, too, whether United Nations forces might not be faced with the prospect of turning their attention to Indo-China after the Korean conflict is over if French military reverses continue.

It is thought here that Communist terrorists in Malaya are likely to get considerable outside help once Vietnam forces appear to be in a favorable position for a big thrust southward in Indo-China.

At the moment, it seems to be the aim of Malayan Communists to cause as much trouble as possible and thereby keep a sizeable number of British troops tied up here.

British authorities estimate that the "hard core" of Communist terrorists in Malaya number from 3,000 to 5,000 men.

That seems like a small number compared with the approximate 40,000 British troops and a British-led constabulary force of 100,000 men but the present piecemeal destruction of terrorist bands indicates that British authorities will have quite a job on their hands to bring this to a close.

A strange aspect of the Malayan jungle war is that the Communists seem to be able rapidly to refill their ranks after heavy casualties in skirmishes, ambushes and pitched battles with British forces. Along a civilian defence committee here tonight, Leonard W. Fraser, former Progressive-Conservative Party leader in Nova Scotia who successfully ran the city's bicentennial celebrations last year, was appointed chairman and the name of Rear Admiral Frank L. Houghton, one of Canada's most experienced sailors, was suggested as paid director. This latter appointment was left for further study.

Pride In Work On Farm Stressed By Mr. W. R. Shaw

If we could have the pride in agriculture, in our homes, in our communities, in our culture, and in our traditions, that is met with everywhere in the farming communities of Denmark, Norway, Sweden, Finland and Scotland, said Mr. W. R. Shaw, Deputy Minister of Agriculture, we would not have the problem of keeping our young people on the farm.

Mr. Shaw, speaking at the Charlottetown Rotary Club yesterday, said he had been approached by an elderly farmer who was lamenting the departure of his son who had taken a job in a Toronto factory rather than carry on in the old homestead. "I told him," said Mr. Shaw, "you trained your son to go away. It is your teaching that he has followed. Every time I visited your home you repeated the same story about the hardship of farm life, the low prices you received for your products, or the misfortune attending some crop."

Mr. Shaw said he had had an opportunity during his attendance at the International World Conference of Farm Producers to meet many of the people in the countries he had visited. He had marvelled at the way these lived on an average farm of 25 acres. Yet every home looked prosperous, freshly painted or tinted and a flower garden in front. The people themselves are wonderful. Proud of their homes, their land and their agricultural skill.

Constantly striving for greater production Denmark alone has 152 farms, the production of root crops, going from farm to farm advising on latest developments. These are not government men. They are employed and paid by the co-operatives. Everywhere were the red Danish breed cows, as like as peas, giving an average of 8000 lbs. of milk compared with the Canadian average of 4000 lbs.

Specialized Training Another outstanding feature was the number of schools of all kinds. Many specialized in types of farming or dairying. Others in industry. The folk schools were very popular and gave instruction in history, tradition, and government. It was in these schools that such pride in race seemed to be developed.

In travelling to Norway, Mr. Shaw said he had passed through tremendous forest areas and had been struck by the cleanliness and evidence of care where there was a hazard of fallen branches or happy accidents. There was not even a twig on the ground.

In Scotland he had stayed at a farm home, and getting up early one morning he went out to the barns where he met two young girls. Between them they had had a large number of children. He remarked that he supposed they had started early that morning so that they could attend the Paisley Fair and was surprised to learn that this was their regular schedule. The elder daughter was soon to leave for agricultural college having nearly completed a year on the farm as a student. "You will be glad to get away from milking this hard every day," said Mr. Shaw. The young lady replied that she was coming right back to the farm as soon as she finished her course. It was evident in all these countries that they were developing a rounded life through social education. There was little class distinction. He had noticed in Sweden that when the Crown Prince, now King, had entered one of their meetings, no one stood up or paid any special attention, yet he was aware of a deep abiding respect for the Royal family.

Mr. Shaw concluded his remarks by referring briefly to his visit to the Burns country, and had entered the thatched cottage with a greater degree of respect than in the magnificent cathedrals. He had had the pleasure of sitting in Burns' chair in the Tam O' Shanter Inn.

Girls yesterday were Mr. Bob McLeish and D. E. White, Montague. Rotarians Ernie Coffin and George Walters, presided.

CBC Board Of Governors Meets

OTTAWA, Nov. 20—(CP)—The CBC Board of Governors today reserved decision on a number of applications, including one for a new radio station at Cranbrook, B.C.

The meetings of the board had been scheduled to continue tomorrow. The public meeting was advanced a day when the board found that it could complete its business in one day.

Decisions on the applications probably will be made public tomorrow. Only other applicant to appear at the public session was Rene Lapointe of Matane, Que. He asked that control in La Compagnie de Radiodiffusion De Matane Ltée, operator of station OKEL in Matane, be transferred to himself and members of his family.

Control in the station now rests with Roger Bergeron and Mr. Lapointe. In the new company, Mr. Lapointe's father, Alphonse Lapointe, and his brother, Octave Lapointe, will be shareholders. Mr. Bergeron would retain some shares. Operations of the station will not be affected by the change of control, said Mr. Lapointe.

Other applications were considered at private sessions. Stations CKTS and CHLT in Sherbrooke, Que., applied for permission to transfer some shares. Similar applications were made by stations CHFA in Edmonton and CJAV in Port Alberni, B.C.

N. Nathanson of Sydney, N.S., asked that his control in stations CJCB, CJCB-FM and CJCK be transferred to his sons J. Marvin

Escape Of Amethyst Told In New Story

By ALAN HARVEY LONDON, Nov. 20—(CP)—As the British frigate Amethyst prepared for its race to freedom down the Yangtze River, a telegraphist tapped out a personal message to the commander's wife:

"Have you received £10 from the bank? Write and tell Goldsmiths I can't pay as still in Communist hands. Ichabod. Kerans."

Mrs. John Kerans, wife of the Amethyst's commanding officer, received the message safely in England. "Ichabod" was a personal code word meaning that her husband was coming home. But Mrs. Kerans had forgotten its meaning and didn't know until later that the Amethyst had started its hazardous journey.

These and other behind-the-scenes stories are told in "Yangtze Incident"—The Story of H.M.S. Amethyst—published today (Harper). It was written by Lawrence Earl, a Canadian free-lance writer who interviewed 36 officers and men from the frigate. Earl, 36, was born in Saint John, N.B. and has worked in Toronto and Montreal.

The book traces the 101 days of adventure which befell the Amethyst in the spring of 1949, including the electric moment when Cmdr. Kerans had to gamble on whether to pass to port or starboard of one light on each side of a channel.

British newspapers praised the book. The Daily Telegraph called it a fine example of reconstructive reporting; the Daily Herald critic thought it a "thrilling" story; the Evening News said it is a "grand book, packed with atmosphere."

The Amethyst, returning to Port East, yed, entered the harbor at Hong Kong today almost unnoticed in contrast to her triumphant entry Aug. 3, 1949, after her escape from the Communist batteries on the Yangtze. She has been refitted and recommissioned in Britain.

Remodelling Of Government House Underway

Historic Government House is undergoing extensive remodelling operations on the interior that are not expected to be completed for a couple of months it was learned yesterday.

His Honor Lieutenant Governor T. W. L. Frowse will not move into his new residence until the remodelling work has been finished. A new ceiling is being laid on the main ball room of the 115 year old building. The ball room is directly inside the main entrance on the south side facing the harbour.

Contractor Walter Matheson's carpenters have turned up the kitchen floor and are busy laying down a new one. The kitchen entrance on the east side has been removed and a new entrance will be made later.

New plumbing installations have been installed in one of the bath rooms. This work has been done by Bevan Brothers.

All chairs and chesters are being upholstered with the man in charge of this work being Mr. H. B. MacAusland. The plastering of the ball room ceiling is being done by Mr. Joseph MacDonnell.

Government House of the Old Colonial type architecture was built in 1836 and was first repaired during the time of Lt. Governor Rogers shortly after the turn of the century.

The building was supposed to be made into the MacLean Hospital during the First World War. The Hospital was partly constructed but the war ended before the building was completed. The building was used for a short period as a Technical School and later, district court and present structure being reverted to Government House.

Alberta To Take Power To License Professional Men

CALGARY, Alta., Nov. 20—(CP)—Power to license professional men as doctors, lawyers and dentists in Alberta soon will be taken out of the hands of professional associations by the Alberta Government.

The plan was announced here by Provincial Secretary C. E. Gerhart, whose department handles the issuance of other Alberta licenses.

In an interview, Mr. Gerhart said legislation to cover the scheme would be introduced at the next session of the Alberta Legislature, usually starting in February. It would be the first such legislation in Canada and would start operation early in 1951.

At present, such associations as the Law Society and Medical Associations admit or reject members and license them to practise. Mr. Gerhart said the government's attitude was that it had delegated the licensing power to the associations and now would take it back.

"It would overcome the charge that professional societies are closed," he said. "We plan to open the doors for anyone to come here and practise if properly qualified."

Professionals who would be covered by the plan include doctors, lawyers, druggists, chartered accountants, nurses, chiropractors, naturopaths, chiroprudists, engineers and veterinarians. The associations could continue operations if desired, Mr. Gerhart said, but each member would pay a nominal licence fee to the Province. One licence would last a lifetime.

Qualifications "equal to or better than" those required by the University of Alberta would be required.

Officials of Alberta professional associations declined immediate comment, but in Toronto Dr. Harris McPhedran, chairman of the executive committee of the Council of the Canadian Medical Association, said he would be opposed to "politicians assuming the power to issue licences."

In Ottawa, A. M. Laidlaw, secretary-treasurer of the Canadian Bar Association, said today that the association would not make any statement "one way or another." He said the Bar Association is a "voluntary association" which will accept lawyers from any Province, so long as they are in good standing with the legal society in their Province.

DEATH YESTERDAY Archbishop Kingston's election. Native of Ontario A native of Prescott, Ont., where he was born in 1889, Archbishop Kingston said in later life of his decision to enter the Anglican ministry: "I knew my calling when I was 19 and I've never had a moment's doubt since."

Ordained a priest in the diocese of Nova Scotia, he turned to scholastic work for 24 years. He taught philosophy at King's College Halifax, then at Windsor, N. S., and later was professor of ethics and dean of men at Trinity College, Toronto, from which he had been graduated in 1913.

He became a Bishop in 1940, taking over the task of guiding the work of the Church in the widespread Northern Ontario diocese of Algoma. In 1944, he went back as Bishop to Nova Scotia, the first colonial bishopric in the British Empire.

Missionary Spirit Essentially a scholar, he was filled with a missionary spirit. In his teaching days in Nova Scotia, he spent his vacations on Church work visiting lumberjacks, fishermen and coal miners. Later, in Algoma, he threw himself wholeheartedly into the work of that missionary diocese.

When he took up the Primacy of Saskatchewan he summed up the challenge of his high office in these words: "I hope I shall carry the torch and steadily when the world so needs the light and glory of God."

Just last spring he ordained his own son—Rev. F. Temple Kingston—to the priesthood. Naval padre at Cornwallis, N.S., the son flew to Toronto last Thursday to be with his father during his last illness.

The Archbishop's widow was the former Florence B. Brown. They were married in 1919. They had two daughters, Mrs. W. J. Orr of Toronto and Mrs. H. B. Greensted of Saint St. Marie, Ont.

UPSETS 1947 (Continued from Page 1) Huron to persons of the Jewish, Hebrew, Semitic, Negro or colored races or color. Watterworth Testimony At Fishermen's Loans Hearing

A hearing before Judge J. S. DesRoches was held yesterday at R.C.M.P. Headquarters, Montague, in connection with the inquiry into the operations of the Fishermen's Loan Board, with Mr. J. O. C. Campbell, Counsel for the Commission who examined the following witnesses. Following is the official transcript of the evidence:

Mr. Campbell: We have subpoenaed three witnesses who gave evidence in the case of The King vs. Wilfred Watterworth in July of last year. They are Allan J. McDonald, William Gillis and Wilfred Watterworth. I would like first of all to call Corporal George of the R.C.M.P.

Corporal George, Sworn Mr. Campbell: What is your full name, Corporal? A—Douglas R. George.

Q. You are corporal in charge of the Montague Detachment of the R.C.M.P.? A—Yes sir.

Q. Last week, I believe, you had subpoenas for Wilfred Watterworth, William Gillis and Allan J. McDonald? A—Yes sir.

Q. And you served Mr. Watterworth and he is here, and you served William Gillis and I believe he is coming? A—That's right.

Q. Were you able to serve Allan J. McDonald? A—No sir. I was advised that he went to the United States early last spring and that it was not enforceable.

Among reasons given for throwing out the covenant, one was that it was void because it was personal and did not run with the land through future transactions beyond the original one between covenantor and covenantee.

Another main reason was on the ground of uncertainty, in certain respects, such as that the covenant failed to indicate the intention of the parties as to the amount or degree of the prohibited race or blood that might be permitted to own property.

Railway Case In the railway case, the C.P.R. obtained partial relief from a Saskatchewan Court of Appeals tax ruling. That court had held that municipalities could levy property and business tax on the C.P.R.'s branch lines and business tax on its main lines.

The Supreme Court of Canada ruled that the company's main lines in Saskatchewan are exempt from tax under its 1881 agreement with the Federal Government whereby the C.P.R. contracted to link the east with British Columbia.

The high court further held that branch lines are taxable only when they are lines not required for the operation of the main line. The case involved $500,000 in 1948 taxes which about 150 municipalities had sought to impose on the C.P.R., which has 416 miles of main line and 1,608 lines of charter branch lines in Saskatchewan.

The alimony decision came in a case brought by Mrs. Bertha Maynard of Toronto, who had sought to obtain further alimony from her former husband, Cecil E. Maynard, after she had agreed to a lump-sum settlement of $1,200 in a divorce court order. The Supreme Court ruled against reopening the case.
