

The Genial Fish Vendor Makes Season's Last Call

"Well, I guess this is it: the last trip!" our genial weekly vendor of fish commented this afternoon, having presented his wares at his door. Ever since Spring dried the byways and roads for his smart little truck, he has delivered weekly to the fresh fish to such farmers and these, usually to gain their blessings, in that at Alderlea, I cannot in time to answer nicely the often bewildering question as to "Now, what shall we have for supper?" Then a firm and firm from the ice in the tank to the pot or pan, it made a choice dish in St. Peter's.

Today it was the cured fish he brought. James himself from the bars to select our winter's needs: the salt cod and the pall of herrings, to satisfy for the last time the "And through the weeks ahead—and we saw the bleak white day as we looked crunched on the yard-paths and breaths were vaporous on the frosty air; saw also to love the falling snow flakes drift down in a lovely benison over the quiet fall fields. Saw roses in the "deepest carrairs," first feathered red, and a serenity and beauty of the side over the countryside.

"Hope you have a good winter, the both of you!" our fishman smiled at parting, "and I'll see you again come the spring."

Then the boats will go out for the last time, as a happy morning's river, as we have so often seen them going out to the deep waters to dip up the harvest there. Leaving in the hands of the fisherman and a widening expanse of water. And loved ones on shore will watch them out of sight—far out into the horizon, as we on land have watching of folks go out of door, with a good wish on our lips, looking them past a hilltop, or around some convenient bend of way. Sprink will be here then. Wild geese will be here brought in. Their joyous calls will proclaim the a Robin in budding branches will sing in a broken run of notes. And the new bulbs, that, with Alex we tucked away started in the garden, will be in leaves freshly green, give us warrant of its stay. And shall we not love it? Hoping presently to bend down a spray of lilies to catch that old-fashioned's music to welcome their first swallows and the hum-mingbirds and bees.

"And will be older then!" Alex smiled to think of it, when we spoke of Spring's coming to-day.

A high wind swept today's fields. There were glimpses of the sun, but the falling storm window over to the north which keeps our African vlogs, and the sun shined rather coldly the season's way. The farmwork.

"It's a strange mixture we do these days" a visiting farmer of today offered, "I have an old-fashioned's music to welcome their first swallows and the hum-mingbirds and bees. And will be older then!" Alex smiled to think of it, when we spoke of Spring's coming to-day.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

The monthly meeting of the Pastors' Club of Memorial LORA was held at the home of Mrs. L. M. Beaton recently. The president, Alice Jewell, conducted the meeting and the chaplain, Jessie Larier was the devotional leader.

Following the business meeting, the president presented the secretary, Margaret Sillaw, with a birthday gift in appreciation of the six years she has acted as recording and press secretary. The hostess, assisted by Blanche MacKenzie, Elizabeth Gillespie, Elida Behant and Emma Alley served a delicious buffet supper. The table was decorated with a birthday cake.

Following this a "white elephant sale" was held with Mrs. Jewell acting as the auctioneer. Herb MacLeod, 15 Walther Drive, Charlottetown is a patient in the Prince Edward Island Hospital. Mr. MacLeod has been in hospital since last month, when he was injured in an accident.

Mrs. Fenton Court, Bedford returned home recently from Beaufort, Que. where she was vacationing with her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. J. Smith.

Mr. Dan Parquharson, Mermaid, is a patient in the Prince Edward Island Hospital, where he underwent surgery. On Sunday, November 11 the terms of promoting the fair is most a year. We have been engaged since early Spring. We had set our wedding date for October of this year, but now I don't know what to do. I am almost 8 months' pregnant and I am not sure that Robert still wants to marry me. He says he loves me very much and we will be married in October, but if he really means that, would he date another girl?

He used to be such fun until he met an Irish girl and then this new girl came into his life. I want him and the baby so much but I am almost sick with suffering. Please help me. -C.V. C.V.: All things considered, it seems to me that you and Robert should be married at once.

Inasmuch as you are of marrying age, have dated Robert for a year, were engaged to him before the problem developed, inasmuch as you love him, inasmuch as you are almost 8 months' pregnant, as he says he still loves you and means to marry you, you should be going away with him. I think the fully responsible move is to regarding the relationship without delay.

WEDDING DATE IS SET, BUT FIANCE STILL DATES OTHERS

Dear Mary Haworth: I have been going with Robert for almost a year. We have been engaged since early Spring. We had set our wedding date for October of this year, but now I don't know what to do. I am almost 8 months' pregnant and I am not sure that Robert still wants to marry me. He says he loves me very much and we will be married in October, but if he really means that, would he date another girl?

I think the fully responsible move is to regarding the relationship without delay.

There is a school-girlish tone in your letter. When are your parents? Have you sought their guidance in this emergency? Tell your pastor (or if you feel you don't dare face them with the problem, my advice is to go to your pastor (or to any good clergyman) and ask him to speak with your parents and Robert on your behalf. It
