ELLEN'S DIARY

Goats And Lads Spoiled By Nice Grandfather

Seavallows and the moted sunbeams of the summery days have taken over piece by piece the barns now almost empty of stock. True, odd ones of the milk cows still remain indoors. A few calves too, babies-of-things. And the herd, cold of eye and of hard forehead and as James commented this evening "not a bad size for his age" regards one casually through the palings of his stall.

But most of the herd is on the grass. In the mornings we see younglings of them graze on a range up a rise toward the skyline. Above is the azure of the morning-sky and below, and about, the green freedom of pasture they have reached after long stabling.

Now the dark is in over the hills of the day and starlight sets a pleasant dimness along the reach of our valley. And here a light, and there a brightness above, indicates tractors still at work over the countryside, at this and that work of the cropping. The pond musicians sing an old aria down where once was the mirroring millpond.

Sing and cease, and the melody is renewed by pipers up the creek and joined in a flow of sound, we fancy, enjoyed by all who hear it, because it signifies the heart of the springtime. Now that windows are open to the night, they pipe us off into Dreamland paths. And co-mingling is

MR. AND MRS. JOHN HENRY WHEELER
 Island Girl Is Wed At Lynwood, California

The Lynwood Methodist Church, Lynwood, California was the setting recently for the wedding of Audrey Cecelia Waugh, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Waugh, Wilnot Valley, Prince Edward Island, and John Henry Wheeler, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Wheeler of Asheville, North Carolina.

Vows were exchanged before an altar banked with baskets of glads and blue iris and candelabra. The Rev. Bernard Watson performed the double ring ceremony. Soloist Mary Grace Albert sang "True Love," "Because," and "The Lord's Prayer."

The bride, given in marriage by A. S. MacGregor, wore a floor length white taffeta gown with an overskirt of tiered tulle and tulle and an apron effect of Chantilly lace over the full skirt. The fitted bodice of Chantilly lace was fashioned with a V neck, trimmed with iridescent sequins and full length sleeves which came to points over the wrists. Her fingertip veil of white nylon tulle was held in place with a tiara trimmed with matching sequins. She carried a cascade bouquet of stephanotis and white carnations centered with a corthe quiet sound of the millstream falling through the spillways—"the gates" in the dam below. Now today... what was it? A sunny wind... a first bee... goldfinches busy dandelions... a lad scrubbed and shining, ready for school tethering his goat in a grassy spot of yard-talking to him, chucking at his play.

"You're thirsty Well, I'm bringing you a pail of water-never think I'd forget-I know what it's like to want a drink badly."

And we heard James, bless him, who "would bare his own house to thatch that" of the children question later and a bit loudly. "And what's that you're taking in the tin?"

"Oh a bite of ration!" Mack replied confidently.

"A bite!" James exclaimed "I'll bet you have enough there to feed a cow!"

"He likes it—and he's doing well on it—" the youngster grinned.

Today, to, was we recall a boy and girl struck by a scent of sweetness about, following it to a willow to catch there its rare fragrance young heads bowed in the sunny leaves. Spring is full of nice scents and scenes.

And enjoying the sun warm on shoulders, the wind soft at a cheek, we sympathized the more with those whom with James we had visited in hospital last evening, they being temporarily denied the joys of the seedtime on a farm. May they come to its loveliness soon—its beauty and bloom and all the unfoldings and miracles of the season. It is a pleasant, healing season that which leads now up to the Summer's days.

And up the creek, the wild cherry trees bloom.

Until tomorrow — — —Diary— Good-night.

Senator Inman is featured in the Winnipeg Tribune of a recent issue. There are portrait studies as well of Senator Calvin Wilson and Senator Muriel McQueen Ferguson. These women were in Winnipeg recently to attend the first national convention of the National Federation of Liberal Women to be held outside Ottawa.

The following is the article on Senator Inman.

The Senator who will travel the furthest to attend the meeting will be Senator Elsie Inman of Prince Edward Island. She will preside at one session and head one discussion group.

Senator Inman says she was active in politics before she had a vote. "In 1917 I was urging women to use their first opportunity to cast a ballot and was also circulating a petition to have the provincial franchise extended to women in P.E.I." She adds that she firmly believes women must take part in politics and public life but that the average woman doesn't want to hold office—at least not to the extent of getting into the flurry and worry of being a candidate.

What the average woman wants is a roof over her head and the right to raise it occasionally. Those of us who have been in business of our own know that we have to raise the roof occasionally just to keep it over our heads."

 Cold tea makes an excellent fertilizer for house plants. It also acts as an insecticide.

Those fashionable colored wigs should be shampooed as often as real hair to look their best.

WAS PROMINENT DOCTOR

Six of Canada's foremost artists were commissioned by Chatelaine magazine to paint their impressions of Elizabeth II on the eve of her Canadian tour. The artists were Harold Town, John Fox, Jack Bush, Robert Hyndman, Bruce Johnson and Ghitta Caiserman.

Mr. Hyndman's full page portrait of the Queen is accompanied by the following comment: Robert Hyndman—This distinguished portrait artist was born in Edmonton, worked for some years in London, flew for the R.C.A.F. in World War I and today works out of Ottawa. His portrait commissions have taken him to every major city in Canada.

Artist Hyndman has this to say about his portrait of the queen: "She was a young girl when I first saw her, sixteen years ago in London. This spring I saw her again—a wife and mother now, incredibly more attractive than photographs usually show.

There was about her a trimness, a soft gentleness, a startlingly clear complexion the camera seldom catches. There was, in oils, a medium I favor, I have an irrepressible quiet humor, a commanding self-assurance endeavored to look beneath the serenity of a beautiful face and into the wellsprings of character which it reflects."

Mrs. J.P. Hillon is visiting her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Neff, Ottawa, and her sister, Mrs. W.E. Hillhouse, Toronto.

Mr. J.J. MacIsaac, Provincial president Canadian Legion and Mrs. MacIsaac, accompanied by Capt. A.C. MacEachern, M.C., Provincial Service Officer, left by car to attend the Nova Scotia provincial convention to be held at Yarmouth, Nova Scotia, June 1st.

Senator Inman Advocates Young Women In Politics

Senator Inman bought an old stage coach inn in 1946, and soon became the first woman to hold a vice-presidency of a Canadian provincial hotel association. She also works with the Blood Donors' Clinic, Canadian Legion, Red Cross, IOOE, the Historical Society, Cancer Society, Association for Retarded Children, Mothers' Allowance Commission and the Women's Canadian Club.

Looking over the list of delegates to the convention Senator Inman said she was pleased with the number of new names. "This is what we need. These younger women coming into politics may lead the way to more women in the Commons, but they have got to learn politics and to be active before office holding jobs come their way. After all, they can't learn to swim and not get near the water."
