Girl Stowaway Escapes Police

LONDON (Reuters)—A beautiful dark-eyed Yugoslav girl who reached here last week as a stowaway aboard a freighter slipped past a police guard Tuesday and disappeared in London's grimy dock area.

Police began a search for the girl, typist Salopek Marija.

Salopek, 20, emerged last Friday when the Swedish ship Ivan Gorthon docked here. She had hidden among orange crates ever since the ship was loaded at Rijeka, Yugoslavia.

Billed by British newspapers as "the peach among the oranges" Salopek sought permission to remain in Britain. She told a reporter: "I shall kill myself if I am not allowed to stay."

But British authorities refused and ordered her returned to Yugoslavia. The ship captain locked her in the ship's hospital for safekeeping.

Early today the lock was opened and Salopek vanished.

The captain said that a crew member who quit the ship when it reached here may have helped the girl during the voyage and might have managed her escape.

The Ivan Gorthon later left London without the shapely stowaway.

Assemble Bones Of Dinosaur

CHICAGO (AP) — One of the biggest assembly jobs in the history of the Chicago natural history museum, reconnecting the 300 bones of a 30-ton dinosaur, has been completed.

The first showing of the 72-foot-long fossil skeleton of the brontosaurus will be in the museum April 18, 57 years after the animal's first bones were found.

"It took patience and perseverance to get Bronty — that's the fossil's nickname — to the museum," said Orville Gilpin, chief preparator.

Bronty is a composite of two brontosaurus dinosaurs of similar weight and height. The first bones were dug up in 1901 in Colorado. Miners found the dinosaur's torso, hind legs, and part of the long tail. They were mounted at the museum.

The neck, forelegs and tail bone of the second brontosaurus were found in Utah in 1942 and sent to the museum. Gilpin said the bones, which were broken into thousands of little pieces, had to be glued together, reinforced with iron and finally added to the original mount.

Motorist Killed By His Own Car

NEW YORK (AP) — An irate motorist was run over and killed by his own car Tuesday after jumping out to take a poke at a taxi driver.

Witnesses to the bizarre mishap gave police this account:

Dino Del Greco, 48, got into his parked vehicle and released the hand brake. The car rolled about 10 feet down a slight incline and bumped a parked taxi.

The cab driver ran to Del Greco's car and punched him on the nose. Del Greco jumped out and rushed toward the taxi, swinging wildly, as the cab driver got back in and drove away.

As the taxi left, Del Greco's car rolled forward again and he fell in front of it.

Witnesses said the taxi driver apparently did not see what happened as he drove away.
