

'MAN IN MOON' IS TARGET

The flight of the Surveyor 2, racing through space after the blast off from Cape Kennedy at 8:32 a.m., EDT, Tuesday is aimed to end right between the eyes of the Man in the Moon. The target is aptly named Sinus Medii, a plain in almost the exact center of the moon as seen from the earth. The Surveyor 2 is expected to end its flight 63 hours after blast off, or early Friday. Box at left locates point where the Surveyor 1 hit the moon on June 2 of this year. (AP Wirephoto)
