BOYS SUFFOCATED

OWEN SOUND, Ont. (CP)—Two boys were suffocated Friday by smoke from a smouldering blanket in an airtight tent. Donald Bumstead, 14, and Jimmy Maidment, 14, were found dead by Jimmy's mother, Mrs. Mel Maidment, when she went to get them for breakfast. A blanket was still smouldering, believed to have been ignited when in contact with a charcoal heater during the night.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead — two of diamonds.

To most bridge players, the least dramatic hands are those where the final contract is less than game. To the purist, a part score hand, whether he is declarer or defender, can be just as exhilarating as a grand slam contract and, in fact, at times even more so.

Against West's diamond lead, South is supposed to bring to bear all his skill to assure making the seven tricks he has contracted to produce. If he plays his cards correctly, he will make the contract; if he doesn't, he won't.

Not all players will make the hand, even if they see the opponent's cards; considerably more will fail if they do not have this advantage.

The correct approach by South, even before he plays a card from dummy, should be first of all to count his sure winners. The answer is six.

The next step is to look for the most promising means of getting a seventh trick. The answer is not so obvious because if he tries to establish either a spade or a club trick by finessing the nine, he cannot be sure it will succeed, and in the actual hand, it will not.

There is, nevertheless, a proper procedure to manufacture a seventh trick, and that consists of leading neither of the black suits, but compelling the opponents to do so. To bring this about, declarer must be sufficiently aware of the situation which will arise eight tricks later to recognize that going up with the diamond king on the opening lead is the crucial play.

After cashing four heart tricks, South takes the ace of diamonds and relinquishes the lead by playing a diamond. The defenders win this and cash a fourth round of diamonds.

South, in the meantime, has come down to five cards. They consist of, let us say, three spades and two clubs. The dummy, at the same time, has two spades and three clubs. When the opponents cash their two aces and kings, they will have to concede the last trick to the queen of spades or jack of clubs, making one notrump.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R
s L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this example A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophies, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

BEDTIME STORIES

The Mouse He Couldn't Catch

By Thornton W. Burgess

In time the boaster finds, alack, He has to take his boasting back.
—Old Mother Nature.

Young Reddy Fox was smart. Every one said so. They said he was his father's own son. That meant that he was as smart as his father and that was saying much, for Reddy Fox is one of the smartest of all people in fur coats.

All too often people who are smart have a good opinion of themselves. This is especially true of young folks who have not yet had much experience. It was true of Young Reddy. He was a good hunter and he knew it. He was especially good at catching Mice.

"I can catch any Mouse that gives me half a chance," he boasted to his brothers and sisters. And he really thought he could. You see, so far Meadow Mice who lived in the grass on the Green Meadows were the only Mice he knew anything about and he spent a great deal of his time hunting for Meadow Mice.

Now he had met another Mouse. It was Nimbleheels the Jumping Mouse. He was a small Mouse, a trim, slim Mouse wearing a light brown coat and a white vest. He really looked too small to take care of himself. Young Reddy had seen him jump above the grass as no Meadow Mouse he had ever seen could possibly jump.

He watched just where Nimbleheels disappeared in the grass. He was sure that Mouse hadn't run after landing for there was no movement in the grass. Now he stole forward without making a sound, ready to spring as soon as he saw that Mouse. He had taken only a few steps when he saw Nimbleheels crouched on the ground underneath some overhanging grass. The Young Fox jumped, sure that he would pounce on that Mouse as he had on so many other Mice. But just as he had on so many other Mice. But just as he jumped Nimbleheels jumped. What a jump that was! Never had Young Reddy seen any one jump like that. He sailed out over the tallest grass so far that it would have taken two and perhaps three of his best jumps for the young Fox to cover that distance.

Never had Young Reddy seen anyone jump like that.

Young Reddy raced ahead after that jumping Mouse, hoping to tire him out and run him down. Nimbleheels jumped again from almost under Young Reddy's nose. But instead of straight ahead, this jump was off to one side. It wasn't as long a jump as the other one had been. The young Fox had seen just where Nimbleheels had dropped into the grass and with all the cunning he had learned he crept toward that spot. He wasn't quite near enough to jump when Nimbleheels once more sailed up over the grass. Again it was off to one side instead of straight ahead.

"That Mouse is crazy. Yes, sir, he's crazy. There must be something the matter with him. He doesn't act the way a Mouse should," thought the young Fox as once more he turned and crept toward the place where he had seen Nimbleheels disappear in the grass.

It was the same thing right over again. Nimbleheels jumped just before Young Reddy was ready to jump. But this time he jumped right straight back over the head of the young Fox and landed in the grass behind him. Young Reddy whirled around, but he was just too late to see just where Nimbleheels landed.

"I'll get that Mouse if it's the last thing I ever do," growled young Reddy to himself.

PENSIONERS PROTEST

Ferry Bluenose To Undergo Inspection

MONTREAL (CP) — The CNR ferry Bluenose, plying between Bar Harbor, Maine, and Yarmouth, N.S, will be withdrawn from service Oct. 1-6 to undergo inspection in the Halifax shipyards, it was announced Wednesday.

The CNR also announced a new service schedule, effective Sept. 15. The Bluenose will leave Yarmouth at 9 a.m., AST, Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays and arrive at Bar Harbor at 2:30 p.m. EST.

She will leave Bar Harbor at 9 a.m. EST Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays and dock at Yarmouth at 4:30 p.m. AST. The vessel will lay over at Yarmouth Sundays as last year.

FIGHTS IN MALTA

VALLETTA, Malta (Reuters)—Three British sailors were reported injured and several civilians were detained in two fights in Valletta's main streets Sunday night. The three sailors were at an open-air cafe in a square next to the governor's palace when the first fight started between the sailors and a group of about 10 Maltese youths. Another fight started this incident, but was quickly broken up.
