

MR. AND MRS. JOHN E. MOUNTAIN

Fifty Years Of Marriage Celebrated By Alma Couple

Mr. and Mrs. John E. Mountain and his wife Sarah Jane MacLean, of Alma celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary on Tuesday, August 2nd. A few days earlier there was a family dinner at the Tartan Restaurant in Summerside at which all their daughters and sons-in-law were present.

Tuesday evening there was a reception at the home of their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Keith Bowness, where more than one hundred relatives and friends called to extend congratulations and good wishes. The bride of fifty years ago was attired in a dress of dusty rose crepe with lace bolero and wore a corsage of yellow roses.

The lace covered tea table was centred with a three tier cake surmounted with a fiftieth anniversary wreath and flanked on either side with tall tapers in silver holders. The floral arrangement was a gift of the great grandchildren. Mrs. John Sandilands, a granddaughter, presided over the silver service and seven other granddaughters assisted in serving. They were Gwen Johnston, Glenda, Sheila and Sharon Neil, Sandra, Janet and Marlene Nisbet. Debbie Bowness, another granddaughter, circulated the guest book.

Gifts from the family and from the grandchildren were presented and a telegram from Mrs. Elmer Greenlaw (the oldest granddaughter), Mr. Greenlaw, and their family of Comox, B.C. was received. Many other individual gifts and messages of greeting were also received.

Mr. Mountain and the former Janet Home were married at Montrose Presbyterian Manse on August 2, 1916, by Rev. E. Lockhart. The bride was the only daughter of Matthew Home and his wife Sarah Jane MacLean, and the groom was the only son of Charles Mountain and his wife, Sarah Jane Donald. Elie Horne, brother of the bride, and Margaret MacAusland, who later became his wife, were witnesses to the marriage. A reception was held at the home of the bride's parents in Rosebank. Only four of the guests then present are now living. They are Mrs. Elie Horne, sister-in-law of the bride, and Mrs. James H. Stewart, sister of the groom, who were present at the anniversary reception, and two of the bride's brothers, Henry Horne of Portland, Maine and Ross Horne of Moose Jaw, Saskatchewan.

Fifty years ago very few couples went on honeymoon trips. The day following the wedding Mr. Mountain made his daily round of the route on which he hauled milk to the cheese factory and then returned to haymaking. Presumably his bride occupied herself with household duties. That evening there was a chivari which many Alma neighbours can still remember.

Mr. and Mrs. Mountain are respected members of the community in which they have lived these many years. They are also actively associated with Montrose United Church where Mr. Mountain has served as an elder and as a Sunday School worker. They have five daughters, Lila at home; Mrs. James Johnston (Hattie) of Summerside; Mrs. John Nisbet (Muriel) of Saint John, N.B.; Mrs. Preston Neil (Beth) of North Milton; and Mrs. Keith Bowness (Blanche) of Alma. There are sixteen grandchildren and four great grandsons.

MARY HAWORTH

Courteous Habits Tend To Enrich Character

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Recently you counselled the mother of two married sons on how to deal justly with the savage hostility of one daughter-in-law towards the other.

You told the mother to come out flatfooted against the hostile girl's venomous bad manners towards her sister-in-law, in the mother's home or the mother's presence.

"Tell her to cut it out," you said in effect. "Tell her you want courtesy, one to the other, and no ifs, ands or buts about it!"

In my opinion, a little open discourtesy is by far the lesser evil than concealed hostility. I encourage to continue her hopefulness, if so far unavailing quest for insight into the difficult younger wife's reasons for hostility.

I have found, with my children, that open acriminous discussion is a better road to family peace than any other, and the tired old rules about courtesy are really destructive in a subtle way. These rules seem to say that if you are polite on the surface you aren't being offensive.

Yet courtesy can be a mask for cruelty, as everyone knows. And a discourteous person may be trying to protect himself from real attack by the other party.

Remember "a man may smile and smile and be a villain." If you've never met such persons, I have. I can, introduce you to several in my walk of life.

Nobody wins arguments by discourtesy, but young people tend to use the first handy weapons in verbal self-defence. A discourteous person may be signifying desperate hurt. Sincerely, K.F.

DEAR K.F.: You are much mistaken in supposing that open acriminous discussion is a better road to family peace than any other.

It is a moral truism that the spoken word has an immortal life of its own. Once uttered, it continues to reverberate in perpetuity, for better, for worse, not only in the endless sound-waves of the universe, but also in the mental storehouse of those to whom it was first addressed, with intent to injure or elevate.

Moreover, the person who trades on a stone-throwing vocabulary, using rough, crude, harsh, caustic, violent, boorish, hateful or insolent language and manner to triumph, supposedly, in an offensive defensive attack on another's poise, is there also sculpting a spirit incapable of knowing peace.

The only good fruit that vicious bad manners can produce is eventual sickness of soul in the wrong doer himself, so oppressive as to drive him to repentance and the practice of charity, in thought and speech, as an antidote to the ugliness in him.

You are completely off on the wrong foot in citing the spontaneous primitive rudeness of quarrelling children as model social therapy for hostile adults in relation to folks who rile them.

The rude behavior that children "can't help" unless and until supervisory adults have guided and supported them in getting control of their tongue (if not their feelings, always), is definitely not the optimum standard of rational self-government appropriate to decent grown-ups.

It is axiomatic that emotion follows action, also, that the individual becomes the sum of his habits. The faithful practice of courtesy, which is the pitch of respect for the inherent rights of others, tends to enrich the practitioner's character with cumulative wealth of loving kindness given and received, since like attracts like.

As Shakespeare wrote: "Assume a virtue if you have it not. For use almost can change the stamp of nature."

In my view, the adult sore-headed hostility is his problem, primarily. Love doesn't paw him, happily scapegoats. He should work on his illness for such it is with specialist help as necessary.

If and when he lets off steam by insulting others, enviously, he becomes insufferable, and

MR. AND MRS. BASIL PHILLIPS

Cousins - Phillips Wedding Is Held At Zion Presbyterian

Zion Presbyterian Church was the scene of a recent wedding when Velma Ann, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bismark Cousins of Breadalbane, became the bride of Basil Harry, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wendell Phillips of Charlottetown. The double ring ceremony was performed by Rev. Donald Campbell.

The bride, given in marriage by her brother, Lorne, wore a traditional white wedding dress and carried a cascade of yellow roses.

The bride and groom had as their attendants, Lorraine, sister of the bride, as bridesmaid and John, brother of the groom, as best man while Donna and John Phillips, niece and nephew of the bride and groom, acted as flower girl and ring bearer respectively. Wilber Cousins and Gerald Perry ushered the guests to the pews.

The sister of the groom, Mrs. Ronald Jenkins accompanied by Royston Muford at the organ, was the soloist and sang, "The Wedding Prayer" at the beginning of the ceremony and "Oh Perfect Love" during the signing of the register.

The reception was held in the Church hall where Margaret Kennedy was in charge of the guest book. Out-of-the-province guests were Mrs. Walter Penon and Carolyn of Buffalo, N.Y., Lorraine Cousins of Buffalo, N.Y., Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Cousins of Buffalo, N.Y., Mrs. Louise Lewis and Donna of Los Angeles, California, Margaret Kennedy of Aurora, Ontario and Mr. and Mrs. George Jones of Regina, Saskatchewan.

The bride and groom are residing in their new home at 87 Maple Avenue, Sherwood, where the bride and groom were the fact should be made clear to him.

ELLEN'S DIARY

Gifts Of Our Gardens Should Not Be Wasted

Now the seeds drift by on a breath of wind, the winged fruits of the maple, the downy silken ones of the thistle family, as light and fragile as the gossamer which floats by on still autumn days. And we are reminded it is now high time to stock up our squirrels' cupboards for the winter. Gifts of our gardens are not meant, think we, to be wasted, but to be turned to good use. Out of the abundance of the present, we may save for-barer days to come. The vegetables and fruit to add interest and nourishment to our fare, when bleak winds are at the window and the white of winter drifts lie about.

We preserved cherries this morning. After an exact recipe but we may say out of some experience with the like and a knowledge of the basic principles of cookery absorbed mostly in a remembered pantry of girlhood, where appetizing old-time foods were made. Breads from the mill-flour, cookies from the fine oatmeal; biscuits feather-light and tasty, made without benefit of the quick baking powders and shortening of now; early springtime pies of dried apples, and those of the currant-dotted, cheese-cake so wholesome! Lemon pies that were as stated, Washington pies deep and good. Marble cakes, sweet as the mixture of sun and cooling shadow to be found now along shady country lanes. We made cherry preserve. And while preparing the fruit, temptingly large and scarlet, smiled though with some dismay, when more than once, "one little locust" came by to "carry off one grain" of cherry, and others including James followed suit!

Today the girl from the house across the lane completed the summer course at University which had proved to be of interest to her throughout, and naturally will be of much value to her in the years ahead. Because no matter what a maid learns, be it from books, or other founts of learning, such as the art of housekeeping from her mother's teaching, it will sometimes, and often in unexpected places, prove to be of worth. Be it learning to play some musical instrument, or make a dress, or turn a neat hat, or operate a tractor in the field; or hush a crying child, or make a good loaf of bread - there will come the occasion one day ahead, when the knowledge and skill will stand her in good stead.

These times we repeatedly hear regrets expressed over lost opportunities like these. "My mother could spin," can hear yet the sound of the little wheel she used. "I'll never know why I didn't learn from her." "My grandmother wove beautiful things: blankets and linens in my girlhood I have held dear. But the times were changing, old customs passing and I thought I would never need to learn that. And so many times since, I've wished I had!" And what of today's Fair? Friday is a day to return to it, to enjoy those features of it we had perhaps overlooked before! Until tomorrow - Diary - Good-night.

Handicraft Van Visits WI's At Elmsdale

When the Women's Institute handicraft van visited Elmsdale West recently 30 women from Elmsdale West, Elmsdale and St. Lawrence districts participated in the courses given by Claire Boute.

During the first week there were lessons in dressmaking, the making of smocked cushions and leather work, and during the second week instruction was given in textile painting, basketry and liquid embroidery. Two hours were spent in class each afternoon and two in the evening.

On achievement day Anne Hamilton and Nora MacDonald from WI headquarters were present to view the work. Local visitors were also present. An address of welcome was offered by Mrs. Alvin Hardy.

On display were 30 cushions, three dresses, 20 pieces of leather work, 15 pieces of textile painting, 10 baskets and a number of dresser scarves and pillow cases done in liquid embroidery.

A gift was presented to Miss Boute by Mrs. George Hardy on behalf of the class.

Refreshments were served and a social hour enjoyed.

MONTAGUE

Rev. Graeme Fraser, Valleyfield recently held farewell services throughout the Orwell Head, Belle River and Valleyfield charges and preached appropriate sermons from the text, "Finally - Brethren, Farewell." Having completed three years of ministry, he and Mrs. Fraser and family, are moving to Amherst, N.S.

During the evening service at Valleyfield, A Memorial Window "The Light of the World" was presented by John K. MacDonald on behalf of the family, including Catherine who passed away earlier this year, in memory of their mother and father, the late Mr. and Mrs. John Neil MacDonald of Kilmuir.

The window was received and dedicated by Rev. Fraser.

The church was decorated with white mums, and white satin bows and lilies-of-the-valley marked the guest pews.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore a long sheer gown of organza over taffeta, with appliques of chantilly lace studded with pearls, and a matching coat of chantilly lace with long tapered sleeves and oriental neckline. Her veil of scalloped tulle illusion was held in place by a design of leaves studded with pearls. She carried a bouquet of American Beauty Roses.

Paulette Buchanan was maid of honor, and wore a steel length dress of shrimp peau de soie with matching headress and shoes.

The bridesmaids were Sandra MacLeod, and Judith Carr, cousin of the bride. Their Mediterranean blue dresses were alike in style to that of the maid of honor and their bouquets were of white carnations tinted to match their dresses.

The best man was Terrance Perry, and the ushers were Russel Stewart, uncle of the bride and Howard Arsenault, uncle of the groom.

The bride's mother wore a dress of turquoise blue, with white accessories and a corsage of pink and white roses. The mother of the groom chose a two piece outfit of Nile-green with bone accessories, and a corsage of white roses.

A reception was held at Citadel Inn, at which the blessing was asked by Terrance Perry, and Russell Stewart proposed a toast to the bride.

Following the reception, Mr. and Mrs. Peters left for a honeymoon to the Cabot Trail and other points of interest. Mrs. Peters travelling in a suit of pink linen and white lace, with white lace hat and matching accessories, and a corsage of pink and white roses.
