

played I was a bit reluctant to speak out. But it didn't help me a bit, I lasted only a very short while. I regret not rocking the boat more."

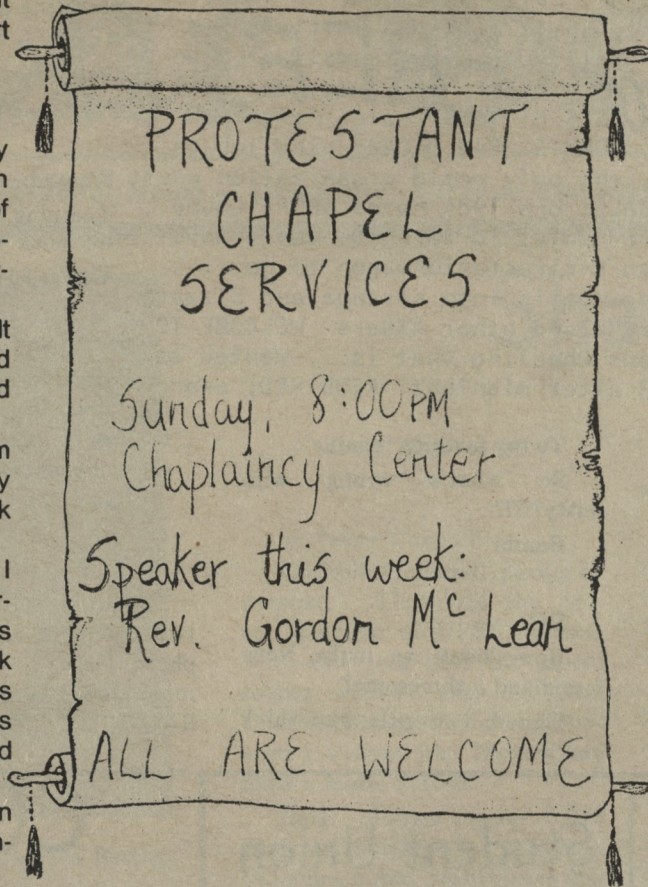

Dr. Alvin Poussaint, professor of psychiatry at Harvard University and an authority on black athletes, says hockey owners are wary of signing black hockey players for fear that a substantial number of white fans would refuse to attend games.

"More black players on NHL teams would result in more blacks in the stands and both owners and coaches are worried that a lot of white fans would not show up if they were integrated."

He dismissed as nonsense a common claim used against black hockey players that they have weak ankles, making it easier to knock them off balance on their skates.

"In all my scientific studies of black athletes I have found no significant psychological differences in their bodies than in whites. But there's certainly a psychological difference. The black athlete's motivation is stronger because sports is a way out of the despair of the ghetto. That's why blacks dominate sports like basketball and football."

And if blacks are given an equal opportunity in hockey, adds Poussaint, they'll eventually dominate that sport as well. □

"Love and Listening"

Speaker: Rev. Glenn H. Turner

District Minister, Northeast District Unitarian Universalist Association

"There is so much we take for granted in life, in our friendships, and in our marriages. When we think we know all there is to know, or have heard all there is to hear about the 'other', we're in trouble. Listening is about the most important aspect of love."
