ELLEN'S DIARY

Preparations Are Made By Royal Fair Delegate

"So it's tomorrow you go on that 4-H trip" James observed to the one girl of the place, when he came this evening to his old armchair.

"If all goes well, weather - wise" she said quietly.

He glanced at her inquiringly.

"Aren't you happy about it?" he queried.

"Oh yes, definitely!" she made haste to reply. "I have looked forward to it. It will be exciting from the time we board our plane at the airport going out, until it puts us down again on Island..."

"...soil" Mack nodded.

"At the same time, I know I'm going to miss...a number of things."

"Me and the pussy - cat" Mack grinned to Curiosity, curled up in a golden round, beside him on the couch.

"You and the pussy-cat" she smiled. "And Alex and Peter. They will forget that I share the coming home evenings, and they will be looking for me all over, and..."

"And when they remember where you are they will be wondering just what you will be bringing home to them!" he offered drily.

"And I'll miss the morning trips in to college. And the class - mates"

"And the studying?" he teased lightly.

"And the studying" she agreed. "And home and..."

"But on the other hand" we suggested.

"Yes, it will actually be a wonderful trip a rare one, with so much to see and so many places to visit."

"I'll remember to sit by a door of the plane so that if you aren't enjoying the ride, you can get off?" Mack chuckled.

"Silly! When we pass over here I shall be looking down at you--but you will be in school then! Anyway, I'll know just how you are feeling when you hear the sound of the plane. You will have that old shut-in feeling I guess."

"Oh not exactly. School's not so bad. Though I would like to be going too, in a way. But say" he added on another thought, "if you should happen to see the Senator, or Malcolm, when you visit the Royal they'll both have stock there--give them my regards!! I mean it" he nodded.

"And what for you Grandad?" she questioned.

"Oh nothing. Just that you bring yourself safely back to us, when the week is over" James said.

And there were preparations made: college books were stacked away. Items chosen to pack in the morning. Coat, hat, and gloves laid out. A checking of necessities: "Now I mustn't forget" this or that. Or "I must have Mother remind me to take..."

In the lookout room under a broad old - fashioned eave of this house, which she has claimed as her own through the summer, her tight still shines: out over the lawn and the oak tree where today, alas and alack, bluejays forecast shrilly continued dampish weather.

"Well, this won't do, Ellen" James comments putting by his reading. "Don't you remember? We must be up in good time, to get those cattle off to market--they are to go in the morning."

He goes to the door at the foot of the back stairs, lifts the latch, then turns.

"We'll be missing the child" he says.

Good-night.....
