

Official War History Announced From Ottawa

OTTAWA (CP)—The first volume of the official history of the Canadian Army in the Second World War will be published later this month, army headquarters announced today.

The 629-page book is called "Six Years of War" and the author is Col. C. P. Stacey, director of the historical section of the general staff.

The volume deals with organization, training and home defence in Canada, the army in Britain 1939-45 and the war against Japan 1941-45.

The second volume, to be published early next year, will deal with the Canadian Army's campaign in Italy and the Mediterranean area. The third and final volume, now in preparation, will cover the Northwest European campaign.

FOR GENERAL READER

Col Stacey said the aim of the three volumes is "to tell the Canadian citizen what his army accomplished in the Second World War and to provide him with means of forming an intelligent judgment on military issues that may confront him in the future."

The army said the three-volume history is intended more for the general reader than for the soldier or military student.

Col. Stacey in 1948 published the 354-page "The Canadian Army 1939-45." It was classified only as "an official historical summary" and the new history will contain much new detail. It won Col. Stacey the governor-general's award for academic non-fiction.

The army said the illustrated photographs and 14 maps, seven of them in color. It will be obtainable from the Queen's Printer, Ottawa, at the postage free price of $3.50.

WE AND OUR NEIGHBORS

NEW YORK—AGAIN

New York again—city of a thousand corners is a different community, pursuing a different way of life—yet all sharing the same basic human problems.

At Macy's world famous Thanksgiving Parade last Thursday, there were children from every section of New York. Blue eyes laughed out of fair faces; great black and brown eyes illuminated with joy in faces tinted like old ivory. The gigantic balloons soon bored me not could the many other attractions hold my attention. But the laughter and ecstatic shouts of the children were thrilling.

In my immediate standing room, a tiny blond girl and a dark-skinned boy of three strayed from their parents. Each was held high above the crowd by a smiling policeman. Each was soon claimed by a happy father or mother. The concern, interest and relief of every man, woman or child in the vicinity was good to observe. Crime there is in this huge city; delinquency too but in the vast crowds that lined the streets for miles harmony and delight in the joy of the children was certainly the prevailing note.

GLITTERING AVENUE

Broadway is still The Great White Way, but Fifth Avenue this month may well be called the "Glittering Avenue." Not only are the windows and interiors of the shops veritable Christmas Trees but most of them are wreathed and festooned and draped with lights on the outside.

One fine shop has a solid wall covered with a representation of a birthday cake, its many tiers outlined in crystal and pink tapers holding electric bulbs. You can imagine the dazzling and exquisite effect with the sun shining on it during the day and the lights on at night.

Another shop is curtained with lights and almost all have bulb-increased evergreen wreaths, window boxes and panels. The windows themselves have backgrounds of silver and gold fabrics with silver and gold-winged cherubs and angels drifting around. The lovely models are robed in cloth of gold and silver and crimson velvet.

FIFTH AVENUE

On the Avenue and in the shops brilliant as jewel caskets, the women's clothes are mostly black in color but there are new trends in style. Coats are definitely straight-lined and many are kimono sleeved and draped or fastened on the side. Shoes for the most part, are the black suede pump with the closed back and high heels, but there are many more of the low-heeled "sensible" type than in the past. The oxfords are also evident.

And ah, the hats! Though the hat, and the small hat (mostly in dark colors) still predominate, there are hats on the scene that make up in sheer weight what they lack in number! Take away your little boy or girl's "Davy Crockett Hat" (and leave him frustrated for life!); remove the tail or tails; set the hat squarely on your head (as Davy wore it?) and you will have the "newest" in hats! Square and top-heavy, of fur or velvet, is hard to tell whether these hats were inspired by the Buckingham Palace Guards or the Russian Muzik, or Davy Crockett! But ladies, study your size and shape and profile long and earnestly before wearing one of these chapeau!
