Seal Pelt Ownership Case Set Over To May

After a solid week of evidence the damage suit against Dr. Marc Arsenault, Magdalen Islands and Louis Denker Inc., was adjourned to early May for a date to be set when Gerald R. Foster, QC., made a surprise move, by asking for a non- suit due to insufficient evidence.

Mr. Foster, counsel for Dr. Arsenault, applied for either a non- suit motion or in the event that was turned down, a judgment for the defendant, before John P. Nicholson, counsel for Louis Denker Inc., produced his evidence.

When Mr. Nicholson stated he would give evidence, the problem arose as to whether Mr. Foster would be allowed to cross- examine witnesses produced by Mr. Nicholson. It was for this reason Mr. Foster asked for a judgment for the defendant.

The case for the plaintiffs was completed during the morning session yesterday when Mr. Nicholson finished his cross-examination of the witness Kjell Henriksen, Halifax.

During the afternoon session Mr. Foster for the defendant and Gordon Black, counsel for the plaintiffs, gave their final arguments in the case of Dr. Marc Arsenault. The case for the defendant, Louis Denker Inc., will begin in May.

Councillor Key in brief reference to the work done by the council during the past year noted that the whole council had a total of 96 meetings during the year, including regular meetings, special and emergency meetings, and caucus meetings, and in addition to this the various committees of the council had held a total of 80 additional meetings.

Advanced Education Importance Stressed

The importance of encouraging students to seek advanced education was stressed at a one-night workshop for Charlottetown teachers, held last night at the new West Kent School assembly hall.

Guest speaker for the workshop, Forbes Elliot, supervisor of Simonds Regional High School district, St. John County, N.B., speaking on "Trends in Education", said the educational system of today provides equal opportunities for boys and girls, although effort is required by students to achieve their goals.

Mr. Elliot said the regional high schools made an important contribution towards furthering advanced education.

Emphasizing the changes in education over the years, Mr. Elliot stated that while 50 years ago the individual decided how long he would remain in school, today, society makes the decision.

In reference to the school curriculum, he said it must be geared to the top and bottom levels of ability in the class; otherwise, it will be catering to the mediocre.

The address was followed by group discussion of questionnaires. Members, divided into groups on the basis of grades taught, reported back to the meeting.

Refreshments were served following the business meeting. Chairman of the meeting was Sister Gerald Ann.

"TRENDS IN education" was the subject of an address heard by members of the Charlottetown Teacher's Institute, during the annual one-night workshop, which was held last night in the new West Kent School assembly hall.
