AN ARCHITECTURAL MATTER.
DEAR SIR,—Although the contents of this letter may not be of much interest to the general public, yet, wishing to state a few facts to the worthy people composing the congregation of the First Methodist Church, in this city, I beg to use the columns of your newspaper for the purpose as the simplest and most direct way of doing so.
Some time ago two gentlemen appointed by the Methodist Building Committee called at my office and stated that they contemplated placing a new ceiling in their church and that as many of the congregation admired the groined roof of St. Paul's Church, which I had designed, they would deem it a favour if I would make a plan of what I considered to be the best treatment for their roof, in competition with other architects. On my asking the terms of competition they said that it would be treated fairly and justly and that if my plans were the best I should be employed to carry out the work. I agreed to the conditions sent and when the several competing plans sent in by myself and others had been duly considered by the committee I was notified that my plans were accepted as the best and was instructed to prepare working drawings and specifications for immediate tender upon $m by the contractors. The committee soon received tenders varying very little from my original estimate of the cost, and for some time I daily expected the order that work should proceed; but I found out that the committee had afterwards sent an order to an architect in Toronto to prepare new plans after the competition had been decided in my favour. As I had prepared a plan that I honestly think will make the interior of the building one of the most beautiful churches in Canada, as it is now one of the best acoustically, I was not a little disappointed, and I consider that I have been treated cruelly and unfairly.
The architect in question was supposed to be eminent on account of his residence in Toronto, while I, on account of being satisfied with the conditions of life in Charlottetown, was supposed to lack that distinction. Some day, however, I hope to meet this architect on his own ground, and I am not at all afraid of the result, judging by a comparison between his design for the Methodist Church and my own.
I consider the proposal to use plaster with heavy mouldings over such a wide ceiling is dangerous, and the effect will be heavy and clumsy, while a light groined wooden ceiling similar in principle of construction to St. Paul's church would preserve the general effect of width and loftiness which the interior now possesses and would be perfectly safe and durable. The first reason for making any change in the ceiling is the present dangerous condition of the plastered roof, and I fail to see the logic of adding to the present danger by gluing up a few tons more of plastered mouldings. It was not many years ago that the priest in the Hope River C. Church was very nearly killed by a portion of the plastered ceiling falling from forty feet above his head and striking the sanctuary floor some four or five inches behind his head. In that church suspicious looking cracks had been in the roof for a number of years, but nobody thought of immediate danger until suddenly the plaster fell.
In the Methodist reiling a great deal of dampness has been noticeable for a long time, and in places of course the nails holding the lath in position will be corroded by rust and are of little value to hold the material up so that there is no knowing when a portion of it will drop. If this occurs when the church is full of people there will be very serious consequences.
I further pointed out in a letter to the committee with accompanying sections showing diagrams of direct and reflected rays of sound, the reasons for the present almost perfect acoustic conditions of the interior of the church and the damage that will occur if a series of plastered arches and flat spreaded surfaces are thrown across the interior space over the present pulpit and if the curved ceiling is torn down from the west end, all of which is proposed by the present Toronto plans, and evidences in my mind that the eminance of the Toronto architect, in the present instance, is not to be classed in his knowledge of a acoustics I remain,
Yours respectfully,
W. C. HARRIS, A. R. C. A.,
Architect.

THOSE FIREMEN'S COATS.
SIR,—Now that the Councillors want our votes, perhaps they can persuade themselves to buy rubber coats for our firemen. A small town like Summerside can do it; why can't Charlottetown? At Sunday's fire many of our firemen had their best clothes spoiled with water, smoke and cinders because of the niggardly disposition of the city council. This matter was brought before the council two years ago by councillor Tanton. Since then we have been sickened with promises. They can haggle over this trifle for years, pretending economy, but they can spend plenty of money to buy champagne with. If you treat our firemen like dogs, you must expect them to bite like dogs; so keep your eyes on their teeth. We must have those coats, or know the reason why.

COMMITTED TO THE EARTH.—The large number of mourning friends in attendance at the funeral of Mr. William Byrne this morning testified to the esteem in which the deceased was held by all who enjoyed his acquaintance. The pall-bearers were: F. St. C. Brecken, Percy Pope, M. J. Moran, Francis Langhrie, Bernard Trainor and Joseph McCarey. The floral tributes included beautiful wreaths from the employees of the Post-Office and the Misses Murray of Boston, pupils of the Convent De Notre Dame. The Mass of Requiem in St. Dunstan's Cathedral was celebrated by Rev. F. R. A. Macdonald. The interment was in the Roman Catholic Cemetery.
