Whim Road and Vicinity

The Whim Road has again been scraped which greatly improves travelling conditions.

Mr. Colin MacDonald, Kilmuir, and Mr. Lester MacDonald and Mr. Leslie Stuart, both of Whim Road, were recent visitors to Charlottetown.

Deepest sympathy is being expressed by the entire community to the family of the late Edith MacKinnon, Milltown, whose sudden passing was a shock to all.

Friends and neighbours are pleased to know that Mrs. John Clarye has returned to her home at Whim Road after spending some time in Charlottetown where she entered the P.E.I. Hospital for treatment. Before returning, she was the guest of her sister-in-law, Mrs. A. Steele, for several weeks.

A miscellaneous shower was held at Whim Road Hall on Friday evening, November 7th in honour of Mr. Stewart McKenna and his bride, the former Miss Ruby MacLeod of Whim Road. On their arrival at the hall, the couple were escorted by Jean Ann Munro and Robert Stuart to their places before a table laden with beautifully wrapped gifts. After the gifts had been opened, Mr. McKenna on behalf of himself and Mrs. McKenna in suitable words thanked everyone for the many lovely and useful gifts. The ladies of the district served an enjoyable lunch, after which the remainder of the evening was spent in old time dancing.

Strange But True

By F. M. MacArthur

Arthur Macphee is the only working smith in Pictou, N.S. catering to the horse trade. Macphee has been shoeing horses for 50 years at the same smithy where his father began 75 years ago.

Arrested on a charge of bigamy, Peter Miller, a letter-carrier in Glasgow, Scotland, admitted that he had a couple of wives for the past 11 years.

Miller supported his wives on a salary of $20 a week, which should earn him a medal of some kind in these days when most men find it tough enough going to run one home and have one wife.

Few persons are able to say, "I was born after my mother's death." Yet strange to say twins were born to a mother shortly after she'd entered an Italian hospital. The mother, 31, died of a heart attack.

Doctors delivered the twins, a boy and a girl in a post-mortem operation. The babies are doing fine. Free lodging and meals are no worry to Percy Leggett, 80, when he leaves his North Bay hermitage and goes to town.

He hurled a brick through a liquor store window and draws a couple of months in the town's jail. That's one way of beating the high cost of living.

Spain still maintains the old-world institution of night watchmen, whose business it is to parade and serenade the sleeping district under their care by announcing the passing hours in a loud sing-song voice.

The serenoes are generally elderly men, who make picturesque figures clad in cloaks with pointed hoods and slouch hats, and carrying swords and little lanterns.

The serenoes carry keys to all the houses, and those that lose their way when returning late from parties, with too much wine under their belts, are steered to their homes and let in by the obliging watchman.

Even the little old woman of fiction who lived in a shoe knew there's no place like home. Now we have another woman who occupies a tiny home only 7 1/2 feet wide. Her name is Mrs. Joseph Marston and she lives at Alexandria, Va.

Originally her home was just an alley between two houses. About a century ago somebody walled in the alley and put a roof over its head.

"The inside walls are her neighbors' walls, which cut down fuel bills, since the neighbors provide most of the heat. This pint-sized 'Home Sweet Home' is Mrs. Marston."

Whales, although they breathe air, can remain under water for 1/2 of an hour at a time.

Blobber on a full-grown whale is often 14 inches thick. No wonder this sea monster can stand a lot of cold.

Harry Gander, Gus Geese, and Sadie Goslin are neighbors near Victor, Montana.

Believe it or not, but the brewing of beer was done largely by monasteries in the 12th to 13th centuries.

Time was when every barber shop kept a separate shaving mug for each patron.

Canada has a new kind of champion—a champion pancake eater in the person of Bert Forsberg, of Fort Frances. His title was acclaimed after he stored away a huge flapjack measuring 24 x 26 inches.

You're never too old to learn says Alfred Perkins who, at 66, attended Oxford University last year.

Plans for a monster Christmas concert in the school here are already started and the graded school will, it is understood, put on their show in the hall in the village.

Mr. P. L. Robbins was a business visitor to the City on Saturday, November 22nd. Another visitor was Mr. Frank Laybolt, on the same date.

Rev. Frank P. Aylward, Bursar at Saint Dunstan's University, celebrated Mass at both churches here on Sunday, November 23rd, in the absence of the pastor who is on vacation.

A former resident of this vicinity was one of the lucky winners of a five dollar bill at Holman's big sale on Thursday, November 20th. His purchases amounted to one dollar and eighty cents and with two coupons for the drawing he won a crisp five dollar bill.

The dance in St. Peter's Lake School was well attended on Friday night, November 21st. Burke's Orchestra supplied the music. These dances are put on for the school building fund.

Mrs. Dan Matheson was a business visitor to the City on Saturday, November 22nd. Her son Donald is manager of the H. H. Marshall News Co. in the City.

"Mr. P. R. Sinnott, Jr., left for Halifax, N. S., on Tuesday, November 19th to resume his duties with the Dominion Weather Bureau after a short vacation with his parents here and friends in the City. In the City he was the guest of his old friend, Mr. E. J. Larter and Mrs. Larter at their Grafton Street home. Old friends are a good standby in any weather, says Mr. Sinnott.

When Miss Bertha MacDonald was visiting her home here on Sunday, November 16th some of the children playing in the yard called out that there was a big rat running through the yard. Miss MacDonald grabbed the double faced axe and let it fly across the yard, and to everyone's surprise Mr. Rat dropped in his tracks. This unwanted visitor has been making trouble around the house for two years, says Mr. MacDonald, and all efforts to trap him have failed until now.

Mr. James A. O'Brien, who was taken very ill a week ago while attending a card party and taken to his home, is reported as better again. Getting along in the evening of life now, Mr. O'Brien and his wife have purchased a home in the village where they planned to reside in retirement. They may not leave their old home after all as it is feared the move might affect Mr. O'Brien, and cause another shock. —N.

New Beauty For Ceiling Fixtures

... and the soft flattering glow of indirect lighting

Here's How It Works

Light is directed upward onto ceiling through inside frosted portion of the bulb. Enamelled "built-in shade" on lower portion of bulb softens downward light. Unshaded spot at bottom of bulb adds attractive sparkle. Available in 50 and 100 watt sizes.

GENERAL ELECTRIC LUMI-BOWL LAMP

The distinctively different shape of G-E Lumi-Bowl Lamps lends modern beauty to ceiling fixtures, old or new. Lighted or unlighted, they banish that "bare bulb look"—give a redecorated touch to living room or dining room, bedroom or hall. You'll find, too, that their mellowed downward light adds new beauty to furnishings and surroundings.

The Lumi-Bowl Lamp is but one example of this Company's constant striving to provide "Better Light For Better Sight." Behind each G-E Lamp you buy are years of scientific leadership, research and development. It pays to ask for G-E Lamps by name... they stay brighter, longer.
