Anglican Girls' Auxiliary And 'Links' Hold Annual Festival

A successful festival for Anglican Girls Auxiliary branches and "Links" was held in St. Peter's Cathedral Hall, Charlottetown on Saturday.

The festival which was attended by branches from all sections of the Island opened with Holy Communion celebrated by Canon J. R. Davies assisted by Rev. Ronald Parsons, Kensington.

Honor rings were presented to Gwynneth Ferguson and Jean Brander of St. Mary's, Summerside; Joyce Sudsbury, St. Mark's, Kensington, and Judith Lewis, St. Peter's, Charlottetown, by Archdeacon J. T. Abbott.

The sermon preached during the service by Mr. Parsons brought out an important question for teenagers, "What is My Vocation?" in which he pointed out that God created everyone for a particular reason and purpose. "He also gave man the gift of freewill and the ability to say yes or no to God," the speaker said.

Mr. Parsons urged the girls to search the New Testament and learn how many saints found their vocation, the two outstanding examples being St. Andrew and St. Paul, and in the Old Testament, how Samuel was trained from his youth, and how he obeyed the voice of God, which is truly fulfilling one's vocation.

Luncheon was served in St. Peter's Hall by members of St. Peter's W.A. During the luncheon the attending clergy, and the diocesan president, Mrs. G. Wood, and the chairman of the youth committee, Mrs. W. E. Champion, addressed the meeting briefly.

In the afternoon two interesting activities were presented by each group. A fine display of the year's work, which consisted of scrap books, sewing and knitting was greatly admired.

The diocesan president assisted in the presentation of badges.

Fashion and form badges went to members of the Kensington branch, Joyce Sudsbury, Olive Moase, Elizabeth Davies, and Pearl, Ruby and Sylvia MacInnis.

Home nursing badges to members of Summerside branch, Jean Brander, Gail Grant, Joyce MacKay, Susan Leuty, Peggy Grant, Lois Frizzel, Brenda Mills, Sandra Travers.
