"PRESBYTERIAN SERVICE—A service for the preparation for the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper was held in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Thursday evening, conducted by the minister, Rev. F. N. Young. The hymns sung were "O Come Let Us Sing Unto The Lord," "Rock of Ages," and "Beneath The Cross of Jesus." Special music by the choir included the hymn "Breathe On My Strand." Five close kin to her foregathered in her honor tonight, to wander again with her in memory down old familiar lanes, and to wish her and hers pleasant happy months ahead. Not young folks are we now, but with etchings of silver among the dark of our crowns—talking now of our grandchildren. ("Let's not discuss those, Ellen" one sister laughed "if we can't find another subject, let's talk of the weather!") but youthful in heart. "I was just remarking this evening" James chuckled when he spoke of the passing years, "Ellen is one of your family who never grew up! She doesn't seem to be able yet to realize the importance of some items of the farming. Do you know what she was suggesting only yesterday—and we so busy? That we stop working at the turnips to put up the room-slove!" "And did you?" one asked curiously. "Did we?" James echoed, amazed at the very thought of it. "Catch them!" Jeanie and Karolyn chorused laughing "not in any busy-spell-of-the-farm!"

And so we live at Alderlea, with no lack of duties to the hands of farmers and housewives, yet with time to laugh—in sympathy and not in self-pity. Time too as we go up and down the ways of our farming to let other thoughts in, that have nothing to do with our work of the moment and yet are part and parcel of our daily bread, thoughts of heavenly places and "green pastures" and lilled fields. "We must buy and sell in the market. We must earn our daily bread. But just in doing these usual acts, May the soul be helped and fed!" It is not in keeping the day's work, And the day's prayers separate so, But by mixing the prayer and the labour. That the soul is taught to grow."

Until Monday—Diary—Good-night...
