

Convicted A. Roman Finds Home in Her Jail

By RICHARD KASISCHKE
JOHANNESBURG (AP) — If Mrs. Helen Joseph gets in a traffic jam driving home from her downtown office she steps on the gas to get out of it fast. Otherwise she may be in trouble with the South African government because for the past five years she has to be home every day at 6:30 p.m.

Mrs. Joseph, a grieving white woman, is under house arrest—the first such under new political control laws exercised by Justice Minister Balthazar Vorster.

This means among other things that she is confined to her home from 6:30 p.m. to 6:30 a.m. She is forbidden to have visitors there except a doctor—who must be considered non-subversive. She cannot leave her home on public holidays or on weekends, cannot attend any political or social gatherings and must report to the police every day except Sundays and holidays. Furthermore she is silenced here and cannot be quoted by word or writing.

If she breaks any of the restrictions she could be jailed for up to three years.

HOME HER JAIL

The Johannesburg English-language Rand Daily Mail has headlined, "Mrs. Joseph's home is her jail."

It's going to be a lonely Christmas.

However, she has her Siamese cat and she gets newspapers and still has a telephone that rings constantly. Well-wishers call mix with anonymous messengers.

Mrs. Joseph works in a downtown medical aid society doing Negro welfare work.

She has been interviewed frequently but the interviews cannot be quoted here or called abroad because she has been sentenced as an alleged Communist subversive.

A brief interview with Mrs. Joseph that has become available outside South Africa quotes her as saying of her arrest: "It doesn't feel very nice. But I try to keep busy at my welfare work, and cheerfully."

In JAIL 4 MONTHS

Mrs. Joseph, a childless divorcee, spent four months in prison as one of the defendants

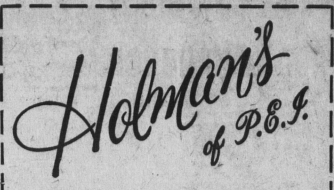

Prime Minister Promises Action On Beauseshne

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Diefenbaker has told the Commons he will bring to Toronto publisher's attention requests for a French version of Arthur Beauseshne's authoritative book on parliamentary procedure.

Social Credit MPs from Quebec have complained repeatedly that the often-quoted book appeared only in English which they had difficulty understanding.

Jean-Paul Cook (SC—Montmagny-Istlet) asked the prime minister Friday whether the government is considering a French translation.

Mr. Diefenbaker said a Toronto publisher and Mr. Beauseshne's estate hold a copyright of the book and that publication of a French edition by the Queen's Printer would violate copyright laws.
