Statement of Principles of Canadian University Press

To clear up any misgivings people may have about the role of The Gem, we present the principles which we hold as a member of the Canadian University Press:

We, the members of Canadian University Press, affirm that we hold the following principles in common:

That the major role of the student press is to act as an agent of social change, assisting students in understanding and acting against oppression and injustice, and emphasizing the rights and responsibilities of the students;

That the student press must, to fulfill this role, perform both an educative and active function, and critically support the aims of groups serving as agent of social change;

That the student press must use its influence as an agent of social change responsibly, as outlined in the Canadian University Press Code of Ethics, presenting campus, local, national and international news fairly and accurately and interpreting ideas and events to the best of its ability;

That the student press must see as its main priority assist students in acting against any system where it is found to be preserving a hierarchy based on power and privilege, or to be oppressive to women, lesbians and gay men, indigenous people or ethnic, religious or other minorities;

That the student press must use its relative freedom from commercial and other controls to ensure that it acts in accordance with its major role, and to examine the issues that other media avoid.

We affirm that the following rights and responsibilities are necessary for the effective implementation of the above principles:

That Canadian University Press members have the right to determine and uphold their editorial policy, including advertising policy, regardless of pressure from student governments, administrations or any others;

That to the fullest possible extent, members should be financially autonomous from any group other than the students who fund them;

That members have the right to receive in full and without delay levies collected by administrations or budgets approved by student governments;

That members should have a written constitution including the following:

That the staff democratically determine the newspaper's editorial policy and internal structure;

That the newspaper guarantees regular, publicized staff meetings with democratic procedures;

That the staff has the right to elect, impeach or censure its editors, co-editors and other staff positions;

That the newspaper defines qualifications for voting staff members;

That the staff alone evaluates through due process charges that any of its members have acted irresponsibly;

That the newspaper must be open to, but not limited to, all students;

That the newspaper has the right to prohibit publication of material that it deems to be sexist, racist or homophobic, or that contravenes Canadian laws on libel or hate literature;

That members have the responsibility to provide a forum for and respect the free exchange of ideas and opinions within Canadian University Press.

A Love Sonnet

Now let us leave Love's turnip fields, my love,
For Love grows fastest hydroponically.
Oh love, can you not see Joy's orange dove,
And not hear Love's kazoo, that beckons me?
O rapturous Joy! O green-blue mist! O leek
Shrubs by the sea! O boundless bliss enwraps
Me. Love's sweet smelling salts forever reek
In the bins of my heart, and no synapse
In my brain shall dishearten me. I see
That Destiny's aquatic pies do not
Hold anguish in our future. Happily
I stand before my lady; Love has brought
Elation. I am far away from Pain's
Blue gelatin and Misery's sour rains.
