

Island Sheep Breeders Score At Atlantic Fair

By NEEL MATHESON
HALIFAX — Island sheepmen scored heavily in the showing at the Atlantic Winter Fair Monday.

Almon and Lincoln the Boswall father-and-son combination from Dunstaffnage had a successful day, though a long one, in the sheep ring at the big show here.

In North Country Cheviots belonging to Almon Boswall, for example, they had the champion ewe and the reserve champion ram. They were second in yearling rams and second in mature rams. They were two and three in ram lambs they were first and fourth in ewe lambs. They had second and fourth in yearling ewes. They were second and third in mature ewes.

The Boswalls had even better success in the Border Cheviot sheep.

Lincoln Boswall showed the champion ram picked up first for old pen young pen aged ram ewe lamb and yearling. In the Border Cheviots he also received a number of second third fourth and fifth prizes.

In the Shropshire class Allison Stewart and sons Dunstaffnage showed the champion ram and champion ewe.

The Stewarts were first in yearling lambs, ewe lambs and yearling ewes.

They placed second in ram lambs, aged rams, ewe lambs, yearling ewes, aged ewes, and obtained third position for aged rams and aged ewes.

Other firsts by the Stewarts were young and old pen animals and fleeces.

In the Oxford Downs class, John Thompson and Son of Dunstaffnage showed the grand champion ram.

The Thompsons were first in yearling rams, aged rams and pen animals; second in yearling ewes, aged ewes, young pen animals and fleeces; third in ram lambs, fourth in aged ewes and fifth in yearling ewes.

In North Country Cheviots, Allison Stewart and Sons, they are Brian and Ralph, were first in ram lambs, first in yearling rams, second in aged rams they had the reserve champion ram.

They were second and third in ewe lambs, one and three in yearling ewes, fourth in a g e d ewes and they had the champion ewe.

They were first in the young pen and second in the old pen. They were two and four in the fleeces.

In Leicester sheep they were one, three and four in ram lambs, one and four in yearling rams, two and three in a g e d rams and they had the champion ram.

In ewe lambs they had one and four, in yearling ewes three and four, in aged ewes two and four.

ANNE TO RETURN Mavor Moore Gives Hint On Summer Festival 1966

Some hints as to what is in store for Islanders next summer at Confederation Centre were given yesterday as Mavor Moore, artistic director of the Centre, wound up a weekend of talks with Frank Storey, general manager, and John Fenwick, musical director.

Mr. Moore said yesterday that although many negotiations are not yet completed thereby delaying confirmation a few attractions definitely have been lined up.

The popular "Anne of Green Gables" will return with virtually the same cast. A few changes are necessary as some of the supporting players have dropped out for various reasons. There was fear for a time that Lianne Marshall, because of her marriage, would not appear. But Mr. Moore felt confident she would return and bring her husband, a minister, with her.

He said plans are also being

formulated to provide a full-size orchestra for all the productions throughout the summer festival. The orchestra would also play for the Sunday concerts.

Mr. Moore would not confirm rumors that the orchestra would consist mainly of Halifax Symphony members under the direction of Mr. Fenwick, but he said "in all our productions we will use as much local and Maritime talent as is possible."

Also scheduled on the summer fare is another musical. No details are available on this as yet but it is known the stars will be well-known stage or television personalities, possibly persons already familiar to Charlottetown audiences.

A play is the third production being lined up. This, too, is expected to star well-known entertainers. Rumor has it that two of Canada's best-known actors will have the leads.

Until the budget is cleared through the Confederation Centre foundation trust, said Mr.

Moore, no further plans can be made as yet. But he was hopeful that an additional production would be included in the festival. Definite announcement may be made in about two weeks, Mr. Moore said.

In addition, special attractions will be presented for the children, and a number of "Excellent" single programs are scheduled, Mr. Moore said.

It is also believed a special event is being negotiated for Sept. 1. This would be a program in honor of the Confederation Conference and will take the place of any celebrations which might have been held July 1, Canada's birthday.

The feeling is that July 1 is Ottawa's day while Sept. 1 is definitely Charlottetown's own.

Commenting on the past festivals Mr. Moore said Charlottetown and Confederation Centre have received "a tremendous amount" of national publicity and recognition. He said all Canada is aware that something very special is happening here, and people want to know more about it.

"Johnny Wayne and Frank Shuster are the best publicists Charlottetown has," he said. All across Canada on their tour they continually emphasized they had just come from Charlottetown and that a warm welcome was always waiting here for all Canadians.

He said Anne of Green Gables has brought much awareness of Charlottetown, too. All Canada knows about it now, Mr. Moore said, and everybody's pretty certain it has the earmarks of a great success.

Mr. Moore returned to Toronto yesterday afternoon where he is artistic director for the St. Lawrence Centre of the Arts, a new Confederation Centre-like project. Mr. Moore and Mr. Fenwick arrived in Charlottetown Friday evening.

Prizes Given For Costumes

The St. Peter's Lions club sponsored a Halloween party at St. Peter's Holy Name Hall on Saturday evening when approximately 100 children attended.

The following prizes were awarded to the children:
First prize went to Doris MacKinnon for having the funniest costume and second prize went to Michael MacDonald.
First prize went to Lorne MacDougall and Cora MacDonald for being the best dressed couple. Second prize went to Allan and Ian Morrison.
First prize went to John Sutherland for having the most original costume. Second prize went to Malcolm Pratt.
The judges of the costumes were Mary MacCallum, Hubert MacLeod and Joseph Lewis.

Advance Voting Fairly Heavy

Voting at advance polls in the province Saturday and yesterday was reported fairly heavy.

In the Alberton area, it was reported that 23 votes were cast Saturday and 26 yesterday for a total of 49.

Montague reported 114 voters using advance polls—74 on Saturday and 40 yesterday.

While only Saturday figures were available from Summerside, it was reported that 39 voters had cast ballots.

Early figures from the Charlottetown area reported advance polling had shown gains over 1963 figures.

POPE BLESSES 10,000
VATICAN CITY (AP)—Pope Paul blessed almost 10,000 persons in St. Peter's Square during All Saints' festivities Monday, saying it was a good day "to meditate on this world and the world to come." His Monday blessing was the Pope's only public activity on this major Roman Catholic holy day.

Royal Trust opened an agency in Charlottetown over 30 years ago which was converted into a branch in 1964. The branch now has opened a savings department.

Queens Candidate Outlines Needs Of Eastern Agriculture

Progressive Conservative agricultural policies designed to meet the needs of eastern Canadian farmers were laid out last night by J. Angus MacLean, Conservative candidate in Queens.

Mr. MacLean, together with his Queens teammates Heath Macquarrie and Kings candidate M. J. McQuaid, was speaking at a rally held in Memorial Hall in Mount Stewart.

"Eastern Canadian agriculture is not sharing in the growth of the national economy," Mr. MacLean stated. "Our farmers do not have the money in their pockets they should have and the rural population is declining at an appalling rate." The former cabinet minister said. "A Progressive Conservative government in Ottawa will bring back energy and vision to federal agricultural policy and our farmers will receive a fair share of the national income. Our party brought a new look to agriculture in the west and we can do the same for the east."

The ARDA program was designed by the Diefenbaker government, although carried on by the subsequent Liberal administration, has never been fully understood by the Liberals, he said. "The ARDA program can be one of tremendous advantage to our people and a Conservative government will revitalize the program so that it may provide the benefits for which it was intended," Mr. MacLean continued.

"We need good practical agricultural schools and a conservative government will assist in the construction of such schools in a program similar to the vocational school grants program where the federal government pays 75 per cent of capital costs.

"ASSURE CREDIT
"We will also assure that farm credit is available at low interest rates for young people to expand and improve farms and farm homes," he concluded.

Speaking on the national election campaign in general, Heath Macquarrie told the assembly that the "Liberals are trying to condition the people of Canada to vote solely on the issue of a need for a Liberal majority government, but the message is not getting through. Things the Liberals say we are not supposed to introduce into the campaign have been introduced and are being weighed by the electorate. I know of no other time in the history of this nation when the citizens of Canada were sent to the polls for no other reason than to play the numbers game. It is a degrading piece of cynicism for a government to tell the citizens to take second place in the quest for majority government.

"This country needs good government and this does not necessarily mean a majority government. The 1957 Conservative government was a minority and it was a good government. The Atlantic provinces got action from this government on problems that had held back our economic development for many years.

"In the last parliament, many pieces of good legislation were put through the house and the people of Canada benefited by the fact that a strong opposition was able to insist on improvements and amendments to important legislation."

KINGS-CANDIDATE
Kings county candidate Melvin McQuaid told the gathering that "the Atlantic Development Board, planned by the Diefenbaker government to bring a
