Bridge hand diagram showing cards in East, South, West, and North hands.

The bidding: East 1♥, South 1♠, West 2♠, North 3♠.

East dealer, North-South vulnerable.

West's double of five clubs was not too sound against South's terrific show of strength.

South, however, was very far above average, and he manipulated the cards as follows:

So, having entered dummy with the club jack, South ruffed a diamond.

Observe that if South had failed to ruff away West's third diamond, he would have had to lose two spade tricks.
