

PROVINCIAL ELECTION! Liberal-Conservative Candidates for the City: HON. NEIL MCLEOD, PATRICK BLAKE, ESQ. THE DAILY EXAMINER. JUNE 12, 1886.

Farming Interests.

"The present Government has proved the farmer's friend." This was said by Mr. Cyrus Shaw, one of the candidates for the representation of Cardigan. Mr. Shaw conveyed to his hearers, in those few words, an important truth. After their economical administration, and their efforts to obtain uninterrupted communication between the mainland and this Province, the Liberal-Conservatives are to be credited with intelligent and practical measures to promote the interests of our farmers. They have imported many valuable animals; they have erected model buildings on the Stock Farm; they have greatly improved our Agricultural Exhibitions, and encouraged the exhibition of stock and other products of our farms in Montreal, Halifax and St. John, thus gaining for them a high character in the markets abroad and improved prices. In point of fact, they have done more to foster Agriculture than any previous administration.

Taxation.

The Patriot tries hard to convince the people that the present Government has really taxed them heavily. If this were true, it would not be necessary to go into elaborate calculations to prove the fact—the people themselves would have found it out long ago. A simple way to demonstrate the truth of the matter, is to refer the people to the expenditure of the two parties. Expenditure is the measure of taxation. If the expenditures be high, high taxes must follow; if the expenditures be low, low taxes or no taxes will be the result.

Apply this test: The expenditures of the late Government amounted, on the average, to $332,882.71 a year; the expenditures of the present Government amount, on the average, to $272,265.38 a year,—$60,600 a year less than those of the late Government.

Steady.

There is some danger that three supporters of the Government will contest the Third District of Queen's County. While this may be accepted as a sure sign of the strength of the Liberal-Conservative cause in this fine District it is anything but gratifying to those who earnestly desire the success of the Liberal-Conservative candidates. The votes which would otherwise go to two will be divided among the three, and the Opposition candidates will thus receive an unfair advantage of which they will not be slow to make the most they can.

We sincerely hope that this danger will be avoided. It is suggested that another Convention be called, and the whole matter discussed and settled in a friendly and reasonable spirit. In any case this seems the best course to pursue. We feel sure that neither the candidates nor their respective supporters would care to see the success of the party impeded by a stubborn adherence to "rights." At any rate their conduct in this crisis will be a test—perhaps a severe one—of their loyalty to the party which they have good reason to believe promotes to the greatest extent the interests of the Province.

We hope for an arrangement of the difficulty; but if this proves to be impossible, the electors should agree to unite and support only two of the candidates. If compelled to take this course, the electors will no doubt vote for those who show that they are amenable to reason and the good of the Party.

Mr. D. Farquharson on our Provincial Resources.

The other day Mr. D. Farquharson, M. P. P., was heard proclaiming to a company on Queen Street that the peat deposits of Prince Edward Island were worthless, and that the estimate of their value at "seven millions" was simply ridiculous. This is a good illustration of that gentleman's deplorable want of information in regard to the agricultural affairs of the Province.

Our peat beds contain at least forty millions of loads of the richest muck, which, when manufactured into manure, is worth fifty cents per load. Taking the whole at one-half this value, it may be set down as worth $10,000,000. This is a mine of wealth lying at the very door of our farming industry, such as the political trickster can never hope to lay his finger on. Where rightly utilized, it is a source of prosperity to the farms to which it is accessible. Many farmers are now using it extensively, and its use is annually increasing as the proper methods of preparing it are being better understood.

The fact that one of our great natural resources, such as this, is publicly sneered at as being of no value, forcibly impresses the lesson that it is time we abandoned the choice of such men as D. Farquharson to represent our farming interests in the Legislature.

Editorial Notes.

—Trade throughout Canada is better this year than last. The traffic receipts of the Grand Trunk Railway for the week ending May 29th were $315,318, an increase of $37,874 compared with the corresponding week of 1885.

—George Augustus Sala, having been invited to contest Hornsey in the Liberal interest, replies that he would have consented to do so six months ago, but that he is now a heart-broken desolate old man, utterly without ambition, and with no heart to enter Parliament.

—The British House of Commons is getting accustomed to surprises, but it experienced a new sensation on a recent Friday, when Mr. J. F. X. O'Brien asserted in the quietest possible tone that he had himself been sentenced to be hanged, drawn and quartered.

—The Canadian Pacific Railway will adopt the twenty-four hours' system in the new summer time-table to come into force shortly. The company also intend to run trains between Winnipeg, Man., and Donald, B. C., in forty-eight hours, about half the time at present taken to make the journey.

—Mr. George W. Inglis, of the Knowles Steam Pump Works, has been in St. John. To one of the Telegraph staff he is reported to have said:

"The Knowles' Steam Pump Works are also supplying the machinery for the Charlottetown water works. These works will have two pumps of 1,000,000 gallons capacity each. One pump will be worked by a water-wheel and the other by steam power. The source of supply is some distance from the city and about midway between the pumps and the town a stand pipe, with a capacity of a quarter of a million of gallons, will be erected."

Isn't this Mr. Inglis a little too previous? —The London World says:—"H. R. H. the Prince of Wales was married when he was twenty-one years and four months old. His eldest son, Prince Albert Victor, is twenty-two years and four months old. The Princess Elizabeth, eldest daughter of the Duke of Anhalt, will attain her nineteenth year next September. She is a charming girl, amiable, accomplished, and entitled to a respectable dowry for Germany. Prince Albert Victor might do worse than to lead this fair descendant of the Brandenburgs to the hymeneal altar. Verb. sat. sep."

—In the course of an article on the fishery question, a St. Louis paper says of Canada, that "it is intensely Conservative. It is 'jingo' to the very core. Its political idol is Lord Beaconsfield; and the man who shapes its destiny, Sir John Macdonald, is the echo of England's great Conservative leader. In Canada there is practically no Liberal party. The opposition to the Ottawa Administration, called the 'Grit' party, is numerically and socially almost insignificant. The Macdonald Administration has at its back the great mass of the wealth and the social consideration of the whole Dominion of Canada."

The New Cardinal.

His Worship the Mayor has received the following official intimation of the honor conferred upon Canada by the elevation of Archbishop Taschereau to the Cardinalate: A Son-Honneur.

M. le Maire de la ville de Charlottetown, P. E. I. Monsieur le Maire,—J'ai l'honneur de vous informer qu'il a plu à Sa Sainteté le Souverain Pontife Leon XIII, d'élever, Monseigneur l'Archeveque de Quebec, à la haute dignité de Cardinal de la Sainte Eglise Romaine.

Son Eminence le Cardinal, Archeveque de Quebec, m'a prie de donner connaissance à Votre Honneur d'un événement aussi considérable dans l'histoire du peuple Canadien.

J'ai l'honneur d'être, Monsieur le Maire, Votre tres-humble serviteur, CYRILLE E. LEGARE, Vicar-General, Archeveche de Quebec, 7 Juin, 1886.

The Orangemen and Home Rule.

A Dublin correspondent writing just before the defeat of the Home Rule Bill, says: "No one can be blind to the fact that the ranks of the Orangemen are being recruited every day from the old Ulster Liberal party. Nationalists, or anyone else for that matter, are not anxious to see the new Government of Ireland baptized in blood, and that blood the blood of Irishmen, and these Irishmen Ulstermen. And yet present indications point to an inevitable conflict should the second reading be carried. I alluded last week at great length to the movement in the North for arming and drilling the Loyalists. From every part of Ulster warlike preparations are still reported. The situation is thus summed up in a leading article in the Belfast News-Letter, the organ of the Orange body.

"The Loyalists are enrolling, arming and drilling many of the leaders having openly declared for a policy of combat under certain conditions. In this case, in addition to the expeditionary forces marching on Dublin, there would be strong garrisons required in Ulster, and an army of observation on the Shannon. An enterprise so serious could not be undertaken by men armed only with shillelaghs, and having to deal with a tough foe. When the bugle call to arms is heard, no one need be surprised to see some of the Sniders in the hands of those who have been told they must assume the responsibility, in the event of the Government of Ireland bill passing, of defending the Crown and constitution, the unity of the Empire. The Protestants of Ulster are pledged to resist any and every attempt to thrust them out of the Empire, and they may be relied upon to redeem their pledge."

The hands of the order in the north are daily being strengthened by the offers of help which are reaching them from every quarter. The Grand Master of New South Wales telegraphs to the Earl of Enniskillen, the Imperial Grand Master of the Orangemen:—

"Orangemen here express sympathy with Irish brethren. Help assured."

A Glasgow correspondent telegraphs last night:—

"The feeling against Mr. Gladstone's Home Rule bill among the Orangemen residing in the Patrick district of Glasgow is growing very strong, and a canvass has been made among them with the view of ascertaining how many would assist their fellow-countrymen in resisting the operation of the bill should it become law. As a result of this canvass, nearly five hundred men have solemnly sworn to take up arms in Ulster. Many of these men are natives of the north of Ireland, while the interest of others is due to the fact that they have relatives there. Some of the men are married, but the majority are single. A large number have passed through the volunteer force."

It may be assumed that the result of the forthcoming election will be somewhat sanguinary—if Mr. Gladstone be successful.

This is Sarcastic.

The Washington Star remarks that: The London Telegraph must be edited by a person who has travelled. His ideas of the American dietary show how well versed he is in the customs of our people. Buckwheat cakes, huckleberry pie and terrapin for the White House wedding supper! Nobody but an Englishman who has found out all our national weaknesses could have guessed the truth so accurately. But why should the London newspaper reader be cheated of other details in which he would be sure to take an interest? Why did not the Telegraph add that the President's wedding costume was a blue coat of the extreme swallow tailed pattern, spangled with white stars; trousers of red and white, in alternate stripes, with straps passing under the boots; a white fur beaver hat, and a white standing collar, very high and with very sharp points? Why did it conceal the fact that the music was furnished by a band of minstrels in burnt cork, plantation shirts and number seventeen shoes? Why did it not mention, among the other decorations in the East Room, the magnificent tier of oxidized silver spittoons provided for the accommodation of the Cabinet officers? And why, oh why, was no reference made to the republican simplicity of the guests, who sat throughout the ceremony with their chairs tilted back and their feet on the mantelpiece? The editor of the Telegraph means well, but he is careless. A writer who knows so much about the social habits and customs of Americans ought not to whet his readers' appetite for knowledge by telling a little and then leave so much untold.

Death of a "Ghost."

A few evenings ago three young men put up a job to frighten a young fellow named Geo. Cline, who works in Waterworth's brickyard, near Wardville, Ont. Cline had been out visiting some relatives, and on returning to his boarding house had to pass near a graveyard. One of these young men, named H. C. Edwards, provided himself with a sheet and wrapped it around himself in supposed ghost fashion and awaited the arrival of young Cline, who came jogging along slowly on horseback. The "ghost" ran out into the middle of the road, where it was seen by Cline, who urged his horse along, but the animal not being fleet of foot, the "ghost" could run as fast as the horse, sometimes almost touching Cline, and at others holding on to the horse's tail. This was kept up for nearly a mile, Cline shouting for all he was worth. When near home the "ghost" took a cut across the field and arrived at the gate shortly before Cline, whose shouts had aroused the Waterworth family, for whom he was working. They opened the door in time to see Cline's arrival, when he at once asked the "ghost," "who, or what are you? Answer, or I'll knock you down." Edwards at once made himself known and ran to his home, which was on the opposite lot. He was thirsty and warm after his long run, and took a copious draught of cold water. Owing to being overheated it brought on convulsions, from the effects of which he died, just six hours from the time he left Cline.
